Sweeping Defense Changes Recommended To Kennedy

Symington Plan Would Abolish Civilian Heads

WASHINGTON (AP)—A tightly controlled defense force, dispensing with Army, Navy and Air Force secretaries and emphasizing speedy military decisions, was proposed to President-elect John F. Kennedy by his defense advisers Monday.

Annual savings up to $8 billion were claimed for the proposed reorganization.

The three armed services would continue to be separate units under the plan produced, at Kennedy's request, by a committee headed by Sen. Stuart Symington, DKMo.

But the committee frankly recommended reducing the influence of the separate services. It said the country can no longer "afford the luxury of letting each service strive to develop in itself the capability of fighting any future war by itself" and that interservice rivalry is steadily increasing.

Defense planning cannot continue to consist of compromises among the three, the committee contended.

Moreover, Symington, a former secretary of the Air Force, said the plan recognizes "the nuclear space age instead of continuing to have this arbitrary and ridiculous division between land, sea and air."

Furor Seems Certain

Certain to set off a furor in military circles and Congress, the Symington committee report sought to justify its sweeping recommendations by saying that in the past the United States has had 18 months to build and mobilize its defenses for war, while "if there should ever be a World War III, we would be fortunate to have 18 minutes to react."

And it said saving time and money are crucial in the race with the Soviet Union for modern arms mastery. Symington estimated at a Palm Beach, Fla., news conference the committee's recommendations could save 20 per cent of the defense budget, or $8 billion, which probably would have to be invested in new weapons development and arms control.

The Symington committee would redefine the services as "separate organic units within a single Defense Department." It cited the example of the Marine Corps, a self-contained force which is, however, part of the Navy Department and has no separate secretary.

Plan Provides Joint Staff

Each service would continue to have its own chief. But these three chiefs, plus another officer as chairman, would no longer constitute the Joint Chiefs of Staff which is now the nation's top military authority in uniform.

Each chief would simply head his own service. Another group of senior officers, appointed by the president from the three services but permanently separated from any particular one, would make up the military advisory council.

The chairman of the joint chiefs, redesignated chairman of the joint staff, would head this group. He would be next in the chain of military command below the secretary of defense.

Moreover, the plan would establish three commands made up of units of all forces and each self sufficient. These — the strategic command, responsible for all strategic missions; the tactical command, responsible for limited and conventional missions, and the defense command, responsible for defense of the continent — would report directly to the chairman of the joint staff.

The separate services would continue to perform their own administrative and housekeeping functions.

High Court Rules:

Negro Bus Riders Entitled To 'White' Restaurant Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday outlawed discrimination against Negro passengers in restaurants that regularly serve interstate bus travelers.

Avoiding constitutional questions that might have had an important bearing on other issues involving Negro rights, the court based its 7-2 decision on the Interstate Commerce Act.

The ruling struck down the conviction of Bruce Boynton, a Negro traveling from Washington, D. C., to Selma, Ala. who refused to leave the restaurant for whites in the Trailways bus terminal in Richmond, Va.

Boynton was fined $10 under a Virginia law which makes it a misdemeanor to refuse to leave premises on demand of persons in charge.

Justice Hugo L. Black, author of the decision, went no further than necessary to decide the case. He noted that constitutional questions had been raised in Boynton's appeal, including the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment.

"We think there are persuasive reasons, however, why this case should be decided, if it can, on the Interstate Commerce Act contention raised in the Virginia courts," Black wrote.

"Discrimination is the core of the two broad constitutional questions presented us by petitioner, just as it is the core of the Interstate Commerce Act question presented to the Virginia Courts. Under these circumstances, we think it appropriate not to reach the constitutional questions but to proceed at once to the statutory issue."

The court thereby avoided any hint as to what attitude it might take on lunch counter sit-down demonstrations in the South, as well as on other similar questions.

Atom Test Ban Talks Recessed

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The three-power nuclear test ban talks went into another long recess Monday, still deadlocked and with no apparent optimism for the future of the marathon negotiation.

U. S. delegate Charles C. Stelle proposed a two-month interruption at the 273rd session of the conference because, he told Soviet negotiator Semyon K. Tsarapkin, experience of recent weeks "does not offer any prospects for progress."

The recess, he said, will also give the forthcoming administration of President-elect John F. Kennedy an opportunity for thorough review of the negotiation for a treaty to suspend nuclear weapons testing. The talks started Oct. 31, 1958.

French Rightist Leader Vanishes; Trial Recessed

PARIS (AP)—A defense lawyer flew to Spain Monday night in an effort to return a fugitive French rightist leader and head off a possible new rebellion against President Charles de Gaulle in Algeria.

The case of red-bearded Pierre Lagaillarde took a sensational turn when it was discovered he and four others on trial in Paris had vanished. Lagaillarde was co-leader of the French settlers' revolt against De Gaulle's policies in Algiers last Jan. 24.

It was believed—without confirmation—that Lagaillarde may be headed via Spain for Algiers, where De Gaulle is due Friday, and that the former paratroop officer and assembly member may again raise serious troubles for the government.

Defense attorney Jean Tixier-Vignancourt left for Madrid after a conference with the lawyers for the other four fugitives.

He was reported hoping to persuade Lagaillarde to return to Paris by Wednesday.

Defense counsel Jean Gallot told the court an anonymous telephone caller informed him Lagaillarde had slipped into Spain. The Ministry of the Interior, however, said it has no proof he has left France.

The unexpected disappearance caused a two-day recess in the trial of Lagaillarde and 15 other defendants before a military tribunal on charges of attacking the security of the state.

De Gaulle is flying to Algeria to promote a plan bitterly opposed by French settlers — increasing self-government in the vast territory. But French authorities in Algiers said the disappearance of the five was no cause for alarm.

Eavesdropping By Spike Mike Gets Court Ear

WASHINGTON (AP)—A shiny needle microphone and a routine gambling charge provided another Supreme Court battle Monday in the long legal war over electronic eavesdropping by police.

Directly at stake was the case of three men convicted on gambling charges through evidence obtained in part by thrusting the 12-inch steel spike into a wall of their office and picking up their words.

But the whole question of evidence-gathering by use of listening devices was at issue as defense counsel urged the court to overturn earlier decisions, if necessary, to preserve the right of privacy which he said is menaced by new gadgets.

The government, in its hour of argument, told the court that if more safeguards for the constitutionally protected right of privacy are needed, they should be provided by legislation at federal and state level.

Julius Silverman and Robert L. Martin of Washington and Meyer Schwartz of Pittsburgh were convicted in 1958 of running what police described as a $40,000-a-day gambling operation in a house in northwest Washington close to the State Department.

Each drew a sentence of 20 months to five years. The conviction was upheld by the U.S. Court of Appeals in a 2-1 decision and the Supreme Court agreed to review the case. It was taken under advisement after two hours of argument Monday and there was no indication when a ruling will be made.

Undisputed testimony at the trial was that the microphone spike, about the size of a large knitting needle, was thrust into the common wall separating Nos. 410 and 408 on 21st St., N.W. This needle carried sound through an amplifier into earphones worn by Internal Revenue agents and metropolitican police officers. Notes on the conversations overheard were used in obtaining a search warrant to raid No. 408 and later accepted in evidence at the trial.

Ike Feels Like Prisoner Seeing Scaffold Go Up

"This," he said, "is the first time I've seen that. I feel like the fellow in jail who is watching his scaffold being built."

Eggs Hurled As 17 Pupils Run Blockade

School Boycott At New Orleans Shows Signs Of Weakening

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Blockade-running white children—a thin phalanx of 17 — slipped through the segregation boycott at the William Franz School Monday and some became the target of egg-throwing demonstrators.

Taunts of "nigger lovers" greeted the white children when they left school in mid-afternoon.

"You're going to get it yet," yelled one of the women demonstrators when a white mother and her children got into a car in front of the school.

Someone threw an egg at the car. It missed, but brought a stern rebuke from police.

Mrs. James Gabrielle and her daughter drove away from the school and when she was a few yards from the building, someone crashed an egg against the car window.

Boycott Weakening?

The 17 white children were five more than the previous high white attendance at the school since it was integrated Nov. 14 by federal court order.

One Negro girl in the first grade attends classes at Frantz.

But, not a white child showed up at McDonogh No. 19, the other integrated school.

And, an official suggestion the pickets would give up if newsmen stopped recording their actions brought hoots of derision.

"We're going to see this thing through," said one woman who apparently voiced the sentiment of many.

Eggs Tossed At Minister

Demonstrators lobbed two eggs at the Rev. Lloyd Foreman when he drove past his home after picking up his daughter. Pamela Lynn, at William Frantz Kindergarten. One hit his car.

A three-judge federal tribunal issued a temporary restraining order which bars the legislature from putting into power a new state-named five-man school board to replace the present New Orleans board. The legislature passed this measure last Saturday.

There seemed to be less tension among the general New Orleans citizenry. School attendance is about normal except at the two of the city's 121 schools.

Sodium Cloud Test Set Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—The space agency announced plans Monday to launch sodium clouds high above the Virginia coast Tuesday evening, weather permitting, to study wind action.

The orange-yellow sodium vapor, from rockets fired from Wallops Island, Va., should be visible from Maine to Florida and several hundred miles inland.

An earlier plan for a similar experiment at dawn Tuesday was canceled because of unfavorable weather.

Clear skies are essential since the scientific data will be gathered by optical means.

A Cajun rocket is to be fired about 5:10 p. m. EST, to eject sodium powder at an altitude of about 50 miles.

Twenty minutes later an Argo D4 Javelin-type sounding rocket will be launched to an altitude of 250 miles.

The purpose of the tests is to study wind velocity, density and diffusion of the upper atmosphere at high altitudes.

Similar illumination of sodium vapor clouds in two tests last year —Aug. 17 and Nov.18—aroused interest from New York to the Carolinas and far inland.

Two Airlines Order 80 New Jetliners

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Boeing Airplane Company announced Monday that Eastern and United Airlines have agreed to buy a total of 80 new swept-wing Boeing 727 jet airliners for a total of $350 million in one of the biggest deals in commercial airline history.

The 727 is the first 3-engine transport designed in the United States since the famed Ford "tin-goose" tri-motor plane was built in the 1920's.

Each of the airlines will buy 40 of the airplanes, which will serve airports with runway facilities too short to accommodate the giant long range jet airliners now in service. Delivery of the first planes will be made in late 1963.

Mobutu Troops Encircle Rebels In Stanleyville

Congo Leader Defers Attack After U.N. Plea

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Col. Joseph Mobutu, Congo army's chief, said Monday his forces have surrounded Stanleyville, stronghold of ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba's Communist-leaning lieutenants.

Mobutu said only a United Nations plea to avoid bloodshed stayed him from sending his soldiers into liquidate rebels in that capital of Oriental Province.

Mobutu warned, however, that his soldiers will strike at the city if either the United Arab Republic or Sudan try to send arms to Stanleyville. He also threatened to cut off some Nile headwaters in the Congo vital to both the U.A.R. and Sudan, if necessary.

Triumvirate Rules City

Mobutu ordered the U.A.R. diplomatic mission out of the Congo last week, charging it was trying to restore Lumumba to power. Sudan works closely with the U.A.R.

A triumvirate of former Deputy Premier Antoine Gizenga, Lumumba's younger brother Louis, and Bernard Salumu, a former Lumumba secretary, rules Stanleyville. The three threaten to set up an independent state in Oriental Province in reprisal for Lumumba's arrest.

A U.N. official denied reports that Oriental Province already had seceded from the Congo, saying: "Secession may come one day, but it has certainly not come yet."

Public Meetings Scheduled

He said reports were received from Stanleyville Monday saying Salumu had scheduled a series of public meetings to discuss the future of the province. Salumu told newsmen in Stanleyville Friday the province wants to remain part of the Congo, provided Lumumba is recognized as head of the legitimate government.

Stanleyville always has been a Lumumba stronghold and U.N. officials believe Mobutu underestimates the difficulties he faces if he tries to seize the city. It also was noted Mobutu's threat to cut off Nile headwaters involves a vast and difficult engineering project.

Mobutu charged the U.A.R. and Sudan reached a secret agreement recently to give all possible aid to the Stanleyville triumvirate.

Tunisia Asks U.N. Observe Algeria Voting

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) —Tunisia opened debate Monday on Algeria with a demand that the United Nations guarantee by its presence the honesty of any referendum on the political future of that explosive North African territory.

France boycotted again the debate in the 99-nation Political Committee in order to demonstrate its position that Algeria is an internal matter of no concern to the United Nations.

Two African nations sympathetic with France—Chad and Congo Brazzaville—called off at least temporarily a plan to seek postponement of the debate. Supporters of the Algerian independent movement among U.N. delegates expressed confidence they could defeat the move.

Tunisian Ambassador Mongi Slim, whose country has sheltered the provisional government of the Algerian rebels, accused French President Charles de Gaulle of raising new fears over Algeria.

Referring to a speech by De Gaulle in Paris on Nov. 4, Slim charged the French president with putting emphasis on the possibility of partitioning Algeria.

He acknowledged that De Gaulle still maintained the principle of self-determination for the Algerian people, but he added the French leader's statement was "full of dangers."

Arrest Of Former Castro Aide Reported

HAVANA (UPI) — Informed sources reported Monday the arrest of Maj. Humberto Sori Marin, one of Fidel Castro's early top aides and the man who presided over Cuba's 1959 "war crimes" trials.

Sori Marin, who drafted the "revolutionary army" penal code which authorized firing squad deaths for all those considered "war criminals," was reported under house arrest since last week. There was no immediate indication of the reason for his detention.

La. Legislature Maps Strategy

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—The Louisiana Legislature held a 90-minute secret session Monday shortly after a federal court refused again to let the Legislature take charge of New Orleans public schools.

"We want to tell the people of New Orleans that we are not quitting" the fight against school integration, Sen. E. W. Gravolet Jr. told the Senate later.

But lawmakers kept quiet about exactly what was discussed in the closed-door sessions of both House and Senate, first double executive session in recent years.

Gravolet said earlier "we have some plans.' He held a handful of papers. Gravolet, vice chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Segregation, said he couldn't reveal what went on in the secret session.

Kennedy Flies To Capital For Talks With Ike Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy returned to Washington Monday from a Florida weekend and made final preparations for his ceremonial meeting Tuesday with the man he'll succeed in the White House.

President Eisenhower, who has not met personally with the Massachusetts senator in a couple of years, arranged a fullscale honor guard and a formal greeting for Kennedy at the much-photographed north portico of the executive mansion.

After that the two men will have a private discussion of the changeover of the administration from Republican to Democratic hands.

Kennedy's first call after a four hour flight from Palm Beach in his private plane was at Georgetown University Hospital where he visited his wife and 10-day-old son, John Jr.

He then arranged a dinner session at his Georgetown home with Clark Clifford, Washington lawyer who has been serving as the president-elect's liaison man at the White House working out details of the power transition.

Kennedy will go to New York for a Wednesday morning meeting with Dag Hammarskjold, secretary-general of the United Nations.

He flew to the family home at Palm Beach last Friday with the Kennedys' other child, 3-year-old Caroline. The little girl remained there and will be joined late this week by her mother and new brother. Mrs. Kennedy and John Jr. are to leave soon after their discharge from the hospital where the baby was born Nov. 25.

Party Chiefs Declare War Not Inevitable

Manifesto Reverses Marxist Doctrine; Red China Concurs

LONDON (AP) — The Communist world declared unanimously Monday night war is not inevitable and that communism can win out over the capitalist West in peaceful coexistence.

"War is not fatally inevitable," it said. "The Communist parties regard the fight for peace as their prime tasks."

Its manifesto, approved at a recent Moscow meeting of Red leaders from 81 countries said war will come only if the West starts one.

The solid front reversing Marxist doctrine and bringing Red China into line was first sprung on the world by Communist papers outside the Soviet Union—in London, Paris and Rome.

Then Moscow radio beamed later to Britain its version of what the official party organ Pravda would publish and it followed the same general line as the outside papers.

Red Chinese Concur

Red China confirmed that it concurred in the declaration and broadcast the text in the Chinese and Japanese languages. Peiping Radio said all the papers there carried the declaration on page 1.

The 20,000-word Communist statement represented strong endorsement of Soviet Premier Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence line and just as strong rejection of Red China's war-is-inevitable philosophy.

The manifesto pointed up two important shifts from old Communist theory by arguing that:

1. East and West can get along, and must if the appalling destruction of nuclear war is to be avoided.

2. Communists in Western countries can proceed in building toward eventual power without revolutions.

The manifesto alerted Communists everywhere that the "peace campaign is the task today."

"Imperialist Propaganda" Hit

In rejecting war as a road to Communist victory, the document accused what it called imperialist reaction of spreading the idea the Reds favored war.

The Moscow radio summary of the manifesto said the Communist system is bound to win in peace over capitalism "by the force of its example." The broadcast added that victory in the Socialist countries is so complete "that a return to capitalism is socially and economically impossible."

Red China's President Liu Shao Chi put his stamp of approval on the peaceful coexistence approach.

"The initiative of the Soviet government and its proposals aimed at easing international disarmament and peaceful coexistence between countries with differing social systems have the sympathy and support of all peace-loving nations and peoples," the Chinese leader said in a speech at Leningrad.

Edgy Ike Meets "Enchantress"

WASHINGTON (AP)—A roaring, rare white tiger and a slightly edgy President Eisenhower met Monday on a presidential safari into the backyard of the White House.

The tiger, from India, is a gift to the National Zoo.

Eisenhower jumped slightly and grinned when the pacing animal leaped at a corner of its cage and growled and roared.

Cameramen wanted the chief executive to get a little closer. He did, but told them: "Look, I'm not going to get into that cage."

The tiger, named The Enchantress, was one of a litter of four born more than two years ago. It was purchased by John W. Kluge, president and chairman of the Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp., from the Maharaja of Rewa. It is one of six the maharajah has, each of which he values at $10,000.

The Enchantress has icy blue eyes and a coat that looks tawny rather than white. It has brown stripes.

She was presented by Kluge to the National Zoological Park, as a gift to the children of America.

There seemed to be less tension among the general New Orleans citizenry. School attendance is about normal except at the two of the city's 121 schools.

Sodium Cloud Test Set Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—The space agency announced plans Monday to launch sodium clouds high above the Virginia coast Tuesday evening, weather permitting, to study wind action.

The orange-yellow sodium vapor, from rockets fired from Wallops Island, Va., should be visible from Maine to Florida and several hundred miles inland.

An earlier plan for a similar experiment at dawn Tuesday was canceled because of unfavorable weather.

Clear skies are essential since the scientific data will be gathered by optical means.

A Cajun rocket is to be fired about 5:10 p. m. EST, to eject sodium powder at an altitude of about 50 miles.

Twenty minutes later an Argo D4 Javelin-type sounding rocket will be launched to an altitude of 250 miles.

The purpose of the tests is to study wind velocity, density and diffusion of the upper atmosphere at high altitudes.

Similar illumination of sodium vapor clouds in two tests last year —Aug. 17 and Nov.18—aroused interest from New York to the Carolinas and far inland.

Two Airlines Order 80 New Jetliners

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Boeing Airplane Company announced Monday that Eastern and United Airlines have agreed to buy a total of 80 new swept-wing Boeing 727 jet airliners for a total of $350 million in one of the biggest deals in commercial airline history.

The 727 is the first 3-engine transport designed in the United States since the famed Ford "tin-goose" tri-motor plane was built in the 1920's.

Each of the airlines will buy 40 of the airplanes, which will serve airports with runway facilities too short to accommodate the giant long range jet airliners now in service. Delivery of the first planes will be made in late 1963.

Mobutu Troops Encircle Rebels In Stanleyville

Congo Leader Defers Attack After U.N. Plea

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—Col. Joseph Mobutu, Congo army's chief, said Monday his forces have surrounded Stanleyville, stronghold of ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba's Communist-leaning lieutenants.

Mobutu said only a United Nations plea to avoid bloodshed stayed him from sending his soldiers into liquidate rebels in that capital of Oriental Province.

Mobutu warned, however, that his soldiers will strike at the city if either the United Arab Republic or Sudan try to send arms to Stanleyville. He also threatened to cut off some Nile headwaters in the Congo vital to both the U.A.R. and Sudan, if necessary.

Triumvirate Rules City

Mobutu ordered the U.A.R. diplomatic mission out of the Congo last week, charging it was trying to restore Lumumba to power. Sudan works closely with the U.A.R.

A triumvirate of former Deputy Premier Antoine Gizenga, Lumumba's younger brother Louis, and Bernard Salumu, a former Lumumba secretary, rules Stanleyville. The three threaten to set up an independent state in Oriental Province in reprisal for Lumumba's arrest.

A U.N. official denied reports that Oriental Province already had seceded from the Congo, saying: "Secession may come one day, but it has certainly not come yet."

Public Meetings Scheduled

He said reports were received from Stanleyville Monday saying Salumu had scheduled a series of public meetings to discuss the future of the province. Salumu told newsmen in Stanleyville Friday the province wants to remain part of the Congo, provided Lumumba is recognized as head of the legitimate government.

Stanleyville always has been a Lumumba stronghold and U.N. officials believe Mobutu underestimates the difficulties he faces if he tries to seize the city. It also was noted Mobutu's threat to cut off Nile headwaters involves a vast and difficult engineering project.

Mobutu charged the U.A.R. and Sudan reached a secret agreement recently to give all possible aid to the Stanleyville triumvirate.

Tunisia Asks U.N. Observe Algeria Voting

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) —Tunisia opened debate Monday on Algeria with a demand that the United Nations guarantee by its presence the honesty of any referendum on the political future of that explosive North African territory.

France boycotted again the debate in the 99-nation Political Committee in order to demonstrate its position that Algeria is an internal matter of no concern to the United Nations.

Two African nations sympathetic with France—Chad and Congo Brazzaville—called off at least temporarily a plan to seek postponement of the debate. Supporters of the Algerian independent movement among U.N. delegates expressed confidence they could defeat the move.

Tunisian Ambassador Mongi Slim, whose country has sheltered the provisional government of the Algerian rebels, accused French President Charles de Gaulle of raising new fears over Algeria.

Referring to a speech by De Gaulle in Paris on Nov. 4, Slim charged the French president with putting emphasis on the possibility of partitioning Algeria.

He acknowledged that De Gaulle still maintained the principle of self-determination for the Algerian people, but he added the French leader's statement was "full of dangers."

Arrest Of Former Castro Aide Reported

HAVANA (UPI) — Informed sources reported Monday the arrest of Maj. Humberto Sori Marin, one of Fidel Castro's early top aides and the man who presided over Cuba's 1959 "war crimes" trials.

Sori Marin, who drafted the "revolutionary army" penal code which authorized firing squad deaths for all those considered "war criminals," was reported under house arrest since last week. There was no immediate indication of the reason for his detention.

La. Legislature Maps Strategy

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—The Louisiana Legislature held a 90-minute secret session Monday shortly after a federal court refused again to let the Legislature take charge of New Orleans public schools.

"We want to tell the people of New Orleans that we are not quitting" the fight against school integration, Sen. E. W. Gravolet Jr. told the Senate later.

But lawmakers kept quiet about exactly what was discussed in the closed-door sessions of both House and Senate, first double executive session in recent years.

Gravolet said earlier "we have some plans.' He held a handful of papers. Gravolet, vice chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Segregation, said he couldn't reveal what went on in the secret session.

Kennedy Flies To Capital For Talks With Ike Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy returned to Washington Monday from a Florida weekend and made final preparations for his ceremonial meeting Tuesday with the man he'll succeed in the White House.

President Eisenhower, who has not met personally with the Massachusetts senator in a couple of years, arranged a fullscale honor guard and a formal greeting for Kennedy at the much-photographed north portico of the executive mansion.

After that the two men will have a private discussion of the changeover of the administration from Republican to Democratic hands.

Kennedy's first call after a four hour flight from Palm Beach in his private plane was at Georgetown University Hospital where he visited his wife and 10-day-old son, John Jr.

He then arranged a dinner session at his Georgetown home with Clark Clifford, Washington lawyer who has been serving as the president-elect's liaison man at the White House working out details of the power transition.

Kennedy will go to New York for a Wednesday morning meeting with Dag Hammarskjold, secretary-general of the United Nations.

He flew to the family home at Palm Beach last Friday with the Kennedys' other child, 3-year-old Caroline. The little girl remained there and will be joined late this week by her mother and new brother. Mrs. Kennedy and John Jr. are to leave soon after their discharge from the hospital where the baby was born Nov. 25.

Party Chiefs Declare War Not Inevitable

Manifesto Reverses Marxist Doctrine; Red China Concurs

LONDON (AP) — The Communist world declared unanimously Monday night war is not inevitable and that communism can win out over the capitalist West in peaceful coexistence.

"War is not fatally inevitable," it said. "The Communist parties regard the fight for peace as their prime tasks."

Its manifesto, approved at a recent Moscow meeting of Red leaders from 81 countries said war will come only if the West starts one.

The solid front reversing Marxist doctrine and bringing Red China into line was first sprung on the world by Communist papers outside the Soviet Union—in London, Paris and Rome.

Then Moscow radio beamed later to Britain its version of what the official party organ Pravda would publish and it followed the same general line as the outside papers.

Red Chinese Concur

Red China confirmed that it concurred in the declaration and broadcast the text in the Chinese and Japanese languages. Peiping Radio said all the papers there carried the declaration on page 1.

The 20,000-word Communist statement represented strong endorsement of Soviet Premier Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence line and just as strong rejection of Red China's war-is-inevitable philosophy.

The manifesto pointed up two important shifts from old Communist theory by arguing that:

1. East and West can get along, and must if the appalling destruction of nuclear war is to be avoided.

2. Communists in Western countries can proceed in building toward eventual power without revolutions.

The manifesto alerted Communists everywhere that the "peace campaign is the task today."

"Imperialist Propaganda" Hit

In rejecting war as a road to Communist victory, the document accused what it called imperialist reaction of spreading the idea the Reds favored war.

The Moscow radio summary of the manifesto said the Communist system is bound to win in peace over capitalism "by the force of its example." The broadcast added that victory in the Socialist countries is so complete "that a return to capitalism is socially and economically impossible."

Red China's President Liu Shao Chi put his stamp of approval on the peaceful coexistence approach.

"The initiative of the Soviet government and its proposals aimed at easing international disarmament and peaceful coexistence between countries with differing social systems have the sympathy and support of all peace-loving nations and peoples," the Chinese leader said in a speech at Leningrad.

Edgy Ike Meets "Enchantress"

WASHINGTON (AP)—A roaring, rare white tiger and a slightly edgy President Eisenhower met Monday on a presidential safari into the backyard of the White House.

The tiger, from India, is a gift to the National Zoo.

Eisenhower jumped slightly and grinned when the pacing animal leaped at a corner of its cage and growled and roared.

Cameramen wanted the chief executive to get a little closer. He did, but told them: "Look, I'm not going to get into that cage."

The tiger, named The Enchantress, was one of a litter of four born more than two years ago. It was purchased by John W. Kluge, president and chairman of the Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp., from the Maharaja of Rewa. It is one of six the maharajah has, each of which he values at $10,000.

The Enchantress has icy blue eyes and a coat that looks tawny rather than white. It has brown stripes.

She was presented by Kluge to the National Zoological Park, as a gift to the children of America.

X-Rays For Churchill

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill went by ambulance Monday from his home to a doctor's office for an X-ray checkup on his injured back. The former prime minister, 86 last Wednesday, chipped a vertebrae in a fall at his Hyde Park residence three weeks ago.

Dag Says Lumumba Held In "Inhumane" Conditions In Congo

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) —Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold reported Monday night that ousted Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba, treated brutally by the troops which arrested him, is being held in "inhumane" conditions.

Hammarskjold, in response to Soviet demands for information about the leftist premier arrested last Thursday by the Congolese troops of Army strongman Col. Joseph Mobutu, issued a special report Monday night.

"United Nations troops in Thysville have reported that Mr. Lumumba is under detention at Camp Hardy, " the report said.

"He is said to be suffering from serious injuries received before his arrival. His head has been shaven and his hands remain tied.

"He is being kept in a cell under conditions reported to be inhumane in respect to health and hygiene. An attempt is being made by the special representative of the secretary-general (Rajeshwar Dayal of India) to arrange for a representative of the International Red Cross to visit Mr. Lumumba."

Mrs. Lumumba was said to be on a river steamer en route to Coquilhatville, where Congolese national forces awaited her.

Hammarskjold issued the document to the Security Council on the basis of a report from Dayal.

Hammarskjold reported that Dayal last Saturday lodged a verbal protest with Justin Bomboko, foreign minister and president of Mobutu's ruling "College of Commissioners" against the "arbitrary arrest and brutal treatment meted out by the Congolese national army" to Lumumba.

Dayal asked Bomboko to request pro-Western President Joseph Kasavubu to issue "strict instructions to the Congolese national army to exercise restraint and accord Mr. Lumumba proper treatment commensurate with his position and human dignity, in accordance with the requirements of the (U.N.) Universal Declaration of Human Rights."

Lumumba, the secretary-general reported, is said to be awaiting trial but it has not been disclosed "on what charges or under what law, or by which court the trial will be conducted.'

Maryland Governor Commends Kennedy

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Gov. Tawes Monday commended President-elect Kennedy for his "prompt and forceful redemption" of a pledge to do something about aiding depressed areas.

The governor referred to Kennedy's appointment of a special committee, headed by Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill., to draft a program to help revive economically depressed areas of the country.

Kennedy specifically mentioned Western Maryland among hard-hit areas which he said are in need of revival.

Gov. Tawes was the organizer of a 10-state conference of governors of the Appalachian mountain states which is seeking to promote economic development of the region. Gov. Bert Combs of Kentucky is its chairman and he Sunday sent Kennedy a wire offering full cooperation of the group to the study committee's efforts.

Tawes echoed these sentiments in his telegram to the President-elect.

Aid Purchases In 19 Nations Barred By U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government, in a new move to halt the disappearance of gold and dollars, Monday ordered nations receiving U.S. foreign aid not to spend the money in 19 economically strong countries.

The action, announced by the State Department, requires nations receiving some $400 million in U.S. foreign aid funds to purchase machinery and other capital goods from either underdeveloped countries or the United States.

The government previously decided to cut the number of servicemen's dependents abroad, ordered U.S. military exchanges to stop buying foreign-made liquors and instructed military suppliers abroad to institute a "buy American" campaign.

Officials said the net effect of the new order on this countrys' balance of payments probably will be less than $200 million because the nations involved may overhall their spending habits.

They also said it may raise the cost of U.S. aid by $100 million because many aid items now will have to be obtained in the United States where prices are higher than in the 19 affected countries.

However, officials hoped the move would prompt some of the 19 nations involved to assume the burden of financing more of their exports to underdeveloped areas.

The 19 countries where aid purchases may not be made are Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, South Africa, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, and Hong Kong.

Depressed Area Aid Group Meets Friday

WASHINGTON (AP)—A 10-man committee to recommend a federal program to aid depressed areas will meet in Charleston, W. Va., Friday.

President-elect John F. Kennedy named the group in keeping with a campaign promise he made in West Virginia last May to help depressed areas.

The group will be headed by Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill., as chairman.

Church Council Begins Charting New Strategy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Noah's Ark variety of Christians set to work Monday to hammer out new strategy in a period described as the most cataclysmic in recorded history.

The task faced by the churches "is as great as that which confronted our forefathers at the time of the Reformation," the triennial General Assembly of the National Council of Churches was told.

A wide-ranging report on the state of the churches and the world, presented at the opening business session by Dr. Roy G. Ross, council general secretary, said: "The fact that the world is in a state of upheaval and change provides the church with an opportunity such as may not come again in centuries."

The call to action was placed before a mingled potpouri of church delegates representing 33 denominations, each with their own distinctive earmarks.

There were Eastern Orthodox churchmen with their sense of awe and mystery in worship; Congregationalists with their stress on local responsibility; Lutherans, emphasizing salvation through faith rather than works; the Presbyterians, stressing Gods' sovereignty in all life; the Baptists with their dedication to separation of church and state; the Quakers with their "quiet waiting" for divine guidance; the Episcopalians with their emphasis on historical continuity, and many more.

Altogether, the delegates represented churches with 40 million members, most of the major Protestant and Orthodox bodies in the country.

Ed Kennedy Put On Congo "Spot"

ELISABETHVILLE, the Congo (AP) —President-elect John F. Kennedy's younger brother, Edward, found himself embroiled over the question of recognizing Katanga Province Monday. He had just arrived with two Democratic senators on fact-finding tour.

Sens. Frank Church of Idaho and Frank Moss of Utah had explained at a news conference that the new U.S. administration has no intention of recognizing the independence of this secessionist province any time soon.

A provincial government official turned angrily on Edward Kennedy and demanded: "So. Kennedy does not recognize Katanga as an independent state?"

Kennedy diplomatically murmured: "We have already answered that."

Explaining the policy of the next administration at a news conference shortly after the three arrived from Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, Church said the Congo is now divided into many factions.

"When they themselves have got the situation sorted out." he said, "the United States will appraise its present policy and consider what attitude to take on Katanga."

Spanking Case Takes New Turn

SULLIVAN, Ind. (AP)—A new school principal took over Fred K. Gale's job at Graysville Monday before even a trial date had been set for Gale in a pupil-spanking case.

Elihu Huff, Truman Township trustee, said Gale agreed he should leave because of "community unrest" over spankings.

Zoe Barber, a retired Farmersburg teacher, took over the principal's job.

Remaining on the faculty was Rex Kirchoff, the basketball coach who faces trial with Gale on assault and battery charges.

Prosecutor Paul Whitlock said David Woodard, 13, was spanked with a wooden paddle Oct. 10 for failure to complete a freshman algebra problem over the weekend.

Gale contended he didn't even see the spanking, but he upheld Kirchoff's spanking to "motivate the pupils to do the work—there was no discipline involved."

Britain Braces For New Flood

LONDON (UPI) — Britain Monday braced for fresh downpours after a weekend of savage storms that killed two, flooded streets and isolated thousands of homes.

The North Atlantic gale also took its toll across the English Channel. In Holland a 4-year-old boy was swept into a ditch and drowned; a bicyclist was blown under a car and killed; a motorist was crushed to death by a crashing tree and another motorist blown off the road and injured fatally.

The weather bureau predicted more torrential rains and gale force winds Monday night throughout the country.

The most immediate threat was the flooding of rivers. They turned the Severn and Wye valleys into a lake, cut off most of the town of Shrewsbury and made canals of streets in hundreds of towns.

Roman foot soldiers used bagpipes in the 6th century.

Dooley Says 'Iron Maiden' Holds Key To His Future

HONG KONG (AP)—Dr. Thomas A. Dooley was released from a hospital Monday and said his immediate future depends upon "my iron maiden"—a brace now being made for him.

The American medical missionary entered a hospital last Wednesday with a back ailment. Doctors said X-rays showed destruction of spinal bone structure, likely due to extension of cancer. A malignant tumor was removed from his chest in New York last year.

Dooley, 33, came here last week on a tour in behalf of Medico, the organization he helped to found to take medical care to remote parts of the world. He pioneered in such work in Northern Laos.

"If I can walk and work with my iron maiden," he said in an interview, "I will leave Hong Kong right away and visit all my seven hospitals in this part of the world. Then I want to spend Christmas at home—Muong Sing, in the jungle of Northern Laos."

The average rate of growth of the fingernails is a little more than one and one half inches a year.

Dooley Says 'Iron Maiden' Holds Key To His Future

HONG KONG (AP)—Dr. Thomas A. Dooley was released from a hospital Monday and said his immediate future depends upon "my iron maiden"—a brace now being made for him.

The American medical missionary entered a hospital last Wednesday with a back ailment. Doctors said X-rays showed destruction of spinal bone structure, likely due to extension of cancer. A malignant tumor was removed from his chest in New York last year.

Dooley, 33, came here last week on a tour in behalf of Medico, the organization he helped to found to take medical care to remote parts of the world. He pioneered in such work in Northern Laos.

"If I can walk and work with my iron maiden," he said in an interview, "I will leave Hong Kong right away and visit all my seven hospitals in this part of the world. Then I want to spend Christmas at home—Muong Sing, in the jungle of Northern Laos."

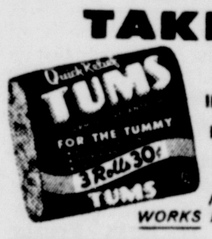

The average rate of growth of the fingernails is a little more than one and one half inches a year.

NEW YORK (UPI) —For a happy holiday, caveat emptor!

That means "Let the purchaser beware."

And it's the national Better Business Bureaus' way of wishing you shoppers a merry, WARY Christmas.

Watch out for the gyp artists and petty thieves. If you don't, they'll get your money, returning nothing for something.

The no-overhead profiteers—including pickpockets — come out of the woodwork in record numbers during the crush before the holiday.

Kenneth B. Willson, president of the National Better Business Bureau, said in an interview:

"Because shoppers arent' wary, hundreds of millions of dollars reach the hands of gypsters during the holiday shopping spree.

"There's no such thing as something for practically nothing. And if you fork over $5 for $25 - announce 'French' perfume offered to you 'because you're a nice person,' don't be surprised to find tap water inside the bottle."

The fake perfume racket is high on the list of Christmas gyps the Better Business Bureau gets complaints about. Gyp charity appeals and petty thievery are other prominent threads in the holiday fabrication.

"Beware especially of an ancient racket," Willson said.

Say a delivery man rings your doorbell and tells you he has a C.O.D. package for an absent neighbor, Willson explained.

Being a good neighbor, you pay and accept the package to save the delivery man a repeat trip. What usually is inside—for about $19.95—is nothing or a brick or old newspapers or a cheap book.

Another favorite Christmastime gyp is the claim stub racket: You get a claim check through the mail and a letter saying that the addressee is holding a Christmas package for you. If you send in the specified amount, the package will be forwarded.

"So you think it's something from absent-minded Aunt Cleo who lives a thousand miles away and you send in the money," Willson said.

"You part with your money for sentimental reasons — and get nothing in return."

Mail and phone appeals from unknown charities are something else to watch. In the New York area, for example, the Better Business Bureau recently warned about a "ribbons of St. Christopher" charity.

The promoter sends little ribbons bearing the likeness of the patron saint of travelers to hundreds. The covering letter asks for $1 "so that others, perhaps less fortunate than you, may receive the same comforting protection . . ."

Willson said a check with church officials proved that the charity is a fake.

"New charity rackets, yet unreported, are sure to turn up between now and Christmas," he said. "When in doubt about the worthiness of any such appeal — via mail or phone — check with your local Better Business Bureau."

Eisenhower Plans Gettysburg Office

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — President Eisenhower will work from an office on the campus of Gettysburg College after he leaves the White House on Jan. 20, informed sources said Sunday.

Eisenhower has decided to rent space in the unoccupied home assigned to College President Willard S. Paul, a former World War II comrade-in-arms, to serve as his headquarters. Paul is living elsewhere in Gettysburg.

Under the so-called presidential pension law, the Chief Executive is entitled to $50,000 a year in federal fund to pay office salaries and rent. The General Services Administration handles the housekeeping details.

The President's office will be a few miles drive from his Gettysburg farm and only a few blocks from the heart of this historic Civil War city, the sources said.

Eisenhower already has said he will make Gettysburg his permanent base once he leaves the executive mansion although he has made it clear he also will do some traveling in the years ahead.

Satellite Tails Called Feasible

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP)—Artificial satellites with bright orange-red tails easily visible to the naked eye are feasible, say two space scientists.

The fiery streaks should be a big help to plane crews assigned to snatch space craft out of the air on their return earthward, the researchers said.

Satellites need to carry only a small amount of sodium to produce this effect, said Wallace Harper and Ralph Armstrong, of the Lockheed Space and Missile Research Laboratory here. They proposed the idea to the company management after laboratory experiments.

A descending space craft would start spewing sodium into the thin air about 120 miles above the earth. At that altitude the air is essentially a vacuum, and the sodium would act as it does in a sodium vapor lamp.

Electrically charged particles normally existing in the air would bombard the sodium particles, acting like an electric current in a lamp. This would cause the sodium to glow brightly, giving off the kind of light you see along bridges and at highways.

A "laced" drink is one in which a dash of spirits has been added.

City Approves 10-Year Tax Exemption To New Industry

The Mayor and Council yesterday unanimously approved a ten-year tax exemption for new industry in connection with industrial promotion efforts and then granted its first exemption under the new law.

The ten-year exemption brings the city into line with Allegany County which has had a similar exemption in effect for some time.

The tax exemption was granted to Paul D. Pickens who recently purchased the old National Guard Armory on South Centre Street and which, the council order said, has been leased to a new industry.

The exemption covers the period 1961 and 1962 and provides for further exemption not exceeding ten years providing the new industry continues to lease premises. If it ceases, then the exemption will also end, the order says.

Water Commissioner G. Ray Light asked whether Pickens will have tax exemption of parts of the building reserved for his own use. City Attorney William R. Carscaden said that the exemption will apply only to that part in which an industry locates.

The new industry referred to is apparently a ladies apparel and sewing operation which recently conducted interviews and took applications from women sewing machine operators.

Leonard Neff, director of the Cumberland Industrial Development Corporation, thanked council for its action and said it was the only way the new industry could have located here. Neff said although the lease has not been signed it is felt the sewing facility will locate here.

River Pact Proclamation Denounced By Pressman

BALTIMORE (AP) — A proclamation published Monday by Gov. J. Millard Tawes that Maryland voters had ratified a new Potomac River compact with Virginia was called "a flagrant act of falsification."

"Knowing as you do that the compact was not sufficiently advertised," Attorney Hyman Pressman wired the governor, "you have used your high office to make a false notification. . ."

The lawyer, representing Southern Maryland watermen who oppose the new compact, criticized the governor for not waiting for a court decision on validity of it.

Pressman recalled that C. Ferdinand Sybert, the attorney general, previously had declined to give his opinion on it before a court ruled.

Pressman filed a suit in Baltimore last Tuesday challenging the compact on two counts. The state has until Friday to file an answer.

Meanwhile, the state Board of Canvassers certified results of the Nov. 8 election. They showed 244,510 votes for the compact and 204,837 against.

Gov. Tawes published proclamations in Baltimore and Annapolis newspapers declaring the compact adopted along with the results of all other questions and contests for office. He had until Dec. 30 to issue the proclamations.

Pressman is questioning whether the compact was legally advertised before the election. Its text was published in only one Baltimore daily newspaper and none of the county weeklies.

Pressman said the law requires that questions on which there is state wide voting be published in three Baltimore dailies and in weeklies in all 23 counties.

In addition, he questioned constitutionality of the compact itself, principally on the ground it transfers jurisdiction over law enforcement on the Potomac to a bi-state agency.

The new compact calls for administration of fishing in the Potomac by a commission composed of residents of both states.

A compact giving Virginians equal fishing rights in the river legally belonging to Maryland had existed from 1785 until 1957. The Maryland Legislature then rescinded it, but Virginia opposed the action in the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Federal suit has been held in abeyance while the effort was made to create a substitute compact.

Great Britain abolished slavery throughout the empire in 1833.

Bermuda Girls, Hearts Mended, Return Home

BALTIMORE (AP)—Three Bermuda girls left for home Monday, marking the successful end to the first stage of a charitable project to correct heart defects in children from the island.

Six more Bermuda youngsters, all facing possible heart surgery, will be brought here soon for examinations by University Hospital physicians.

The three recovered patients—Ruth Smith, 3; Carol Robinson, 7, and Jo-Anne Simons, 7 — underwent surgery in October and November. The three-year-old girl had two operations.

They left here by air for Hamilton, Bermuda, by way of New York, accompanied by relatives on the return trip.

The project was initiated last summer by Dr. Harry J. L. Marriott, associate professor of medicine at the University of Maryland Medical School, during a visit to his native Bermuda.

A team of surgeons at the hospital donated their services for the operations. Hospital expenses and other costs are being covered by the Lady Cubitt Compassionate Association, a charitable organization in Hamilton.

Crime Comic Book Law's KO Upheld By High Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to review a decision holding that major sections of Maryland's so-called crime comic book law are unconstitutional.

The decision was given by the Maryland Court of Appeals. It was appealed to the highest tribunal by C. Ferdinand Sybert, the State attorney general.

The Maryland statute held it unlawful to permit distribution to, or viewing by, persons under 18 of publications depicting lust, bloodshed or crime which might incite violence or depraved acts.

The law, said the Maryland court, failed to establish clear criteria for determining whether published material violated its terms. Further, it said the statute violated the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and press.

Sybert's appeal referred to "the influence of these vicious and corrupt publications" on impressionable minds of children. He said the Maryland Legislature found that persons publishing and distributing the books do so with full knowledge and intent that they will be sold to children.

"Obscenity statutes are not an invasion of, but a legitimate exception to the rights of free speech and press," the appeal asserted.

Sybert asked the high tribunal to reconsider a 1948 decision in what is known as the Winters case. In that case the court struck down a New York anti-smut law on the ground it was so indefinite in defining obscenity that it violated book sellers' rights to due process of law. To avoid prosecution, the court said, a seller might limit his own freedom of speech out of super-caution.

"Since the Winters decision," said Sybert's appeal, "the distribution of (obscene) material has increased each year until now it is one of the most important problems the cities, statutes and the country are faced with, especially in regard to minors."

Another section of the act ruled invalid provided an exemption for newspapers, this being held discriminatory against other types of publications.

The suit against the act was filed in Maryland by Siegel Enterprises, Inc., and Charles Book Center of Baltimore.

Maryland News In Brief

BALTIMORE (AP) — Investigators found $3,146 in cash sewn in the clothing of a woman whose body was recovered Sunday in the Paltimore harbor. The woman, identified as Mrs. Olga Bobrick, 72, had been reported missing Saturday by a neighbor.

The cause of death was not immediately determined.

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Two additional cases of paralytic polio, one of them fatal, were added to the 1960 toll of the disease in Baltimore County Monday.

Dr. William H. F. Warthen, county health officer, said a 19-year-old girl who had received no anti-polio innoculations was stricken last week. In addition, a 12-year-old county boy who died suddenly while visiting in Virginia, he said, was found to have been suffering from polio even though he had received four vaccine shots.

The cases raised to 14 the number of confirmed cases reported in Baltimore County this year, year, compared with two in the same period a year ago.

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — A hearing for two men charged with receiving up to $100,000 worth of airplane parts stolen from the Air Force was postponed Monday until Dec. 12.

U.S. Commissioner Samuel W. H. Moley granted the postponement after a defense attorney asked more time to subpoena a witness.

FBI agents last week arrested Dennis Ronley Conner, 37, and Donald R. Owens, 32, his brother-in-law. Both live in La Plata. Conner operates the Aqualand at Morgantown, and the Southern Trail Casino at Newburg. Owens operated the 301 Ranch at Waldorf.

The FBI said the airplane parts were stolen from the Aero Club at the Rose Valley Airport near Friendly, Md. The club is operated by the Air Force to encourage interest in flying by military personnel and civilians.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board Monday postponed until Jan. 16 the date on which Capital Airlines must improve service between eight cities and Baltimore. The board said the stay was necessary in view of the scheduling and service problems connected with the approaching holiday season.

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Spec. 5 Robert H. DeFrancesco, a 43-year-old Army man stationed at a Niki base near here, was fatally injured Sunday when he was struck by a car. State Police said DeFrancesco, a native of Hazleton, Pa., was walking across U.S. 50 when he was hit.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two separate burglaries over the weekend netted more than $10,000 in cash and jewels, police reported Monday.

Jewelry valued at more than $5,000 was taken from a dresser drawer in the home of David R. Owen, a Baltimore attorney. The loot included a horseshoe-shaped diamond pin, a diamond and ruby bracelet, a diamond and ruby ring, three pins and a string of pearls.

A tavern in Baltimore Highlands was the site of a second burglary in which $5,500 in cash was stolen. Another $2,000 worth of checks also was removed from a safe.

Woman, Child Die In Parkersburg Fire

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP)—A woman and her young granddaughter died Monday in a fire that swept the interior of a frame duplex home in North Parkersburg.

Chief Fire Inspector H. O. Neal identified the victims as Mrs. Beatrice Matheny, 59, and Sheryl Johnson, 4. They were asphyxiated.

Mrs. Ruth Johnson, mother of Sheryl, was rescued by firemen from the roof of the rear porch of the two-story dwelling. Bill Johnson, another occupant of the apartment, also escaped harm.

The other apartment in the building was not damaged.

To Acquire Assets

SYRACUSE (UPI) — Rockwell Manufacturing Co. Monday completed arrangements to acquire the Porter-Cable Machine Co.'s assets by a stock trade. Seven shares of Rockwell will be exchanged for 10 shares of Porter-Cable. Porter-Cable, which makes electric power tools, had a 20 per cent sales increase last year. It will continue under its present management.

Eggs were consumed in the United States at a rate of about 410 per person last year.

The surface of Lake Erie is approximately 570 feet above sea level.

Baltimore's Money Problems Discussed

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Gov. Tawes, Mayor J. Harold Grady of Baltimore and their budget advisers conferred Monday on the city's money troubles.

Tawes said the 45-minutes session was "a very congenial one." Grady also expressed satisfaction with the meeting and, like Tawes, said it included no specific proposals for additional State aid to the city.

River Pact Proclamation Denounced By Pressman

BALTIMORE (AP) — A proclamation published Monday by Gov. J. Millard Tawes that Maryland voters had ratified a new Potomac River compact with Virginia was called "a flagrant act of falsification."

"Knowing as you do that the compact was not sufficiently advertised," Attorney Hyman Pressman wired the governor, "you have used your high office to make a false notification. . ."

The lawyer, representing Southern Maryland watermen who oppose the new compact, criticized the governor for not waiting for a court decision on validity of it.

Pressman recalled that C. Ferdinand Sybert, the attorney general, previously had declined to give his opinion on it before a court ruled.

Pressman filed a suit in Baltimore last Tuesday challenging the compact on two counts. The state has until Friday to file an answer.

Meanwhile, the state Board of Canvassers certified results of the Nov. 8 election. They showed 244,510 votes for the compact and 204,837 against.

Gov. Tawes published proclamations in Baltimore and Annapolis newspapers declaring the compact adopted along with the results of all other questions and contests for office. He had until Dec. 30 to issue the proclamations.

Pressman is questioning whether the compact was legally advertised before the election. Its text was published in only one Baltimore daily newspaper and none of the county weeklies.

Pressman said the law requires that questions on which there is state wide voting be published in three Baltimore dailies and in weeklies in all 23 counties.

In addition, he questioned constitutionality of the compact itself, principally on the ground it transfers jurisdiction over law enforcement on the Potomac to a bi-state agency.

The new compact calls for administration of fishing in the Potomac by a commission composed of residents of both states.

A compact giving Virginians equal fishing rights in the river legally belonging to Maryland had existed from 1785 until 1957. The Maryland Legislature then rescinded it, but Virginia opposed the action in the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Federal suit has been held in abeyance while the effort was made to create a substitute compact.

Great Britain abolished slavery throughout the empire in 1833.

Bermuda Girls, Hearts Mended, Return Home

BALTIMORE (AP)—Three Bermuda girls left for home Monday, marking the successful end to the first stage of a charitable project to correct heart defects in children from the island.

Six more Bermuda youngsters, all facing possible heart surgery, will be brought here soon for examinations by University Hospital physicians.

The three recovered patients—Ruth Smith, 3; Carol Robinson, 7, and Jo-Anne Simons, 7 — underwent surgery in October and November. The three-year-old girl had two operations.

They left here by air for Hamilton, Bermuda, by way of New York, accompanied by relatives on the return trip.

The project was initiated last summer by Dr. Harry J. L. Marriott, associate professor of medicine at the University of Maryland Medical School, during a visit to his native Bermuda.

A team of surgeons at the hospital donated their services for the operations. Hospital expenses and other costs are being covered by the Lady Cubitt Compassionate Association, a charitable organization in Hamilton.

Baltimore's Money Problems Discussed

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Gov. Tawes, Mayor J. Harold Grady of Baltimore and their budget advisers conferred Monday on the city's money troubles.

Tawes said the 45-minutes session was "a very congenial one." Grady also expressed satisfaction with the meeting and, like Tawes, said it included no specific proposals for additional State aid to the city.

Crime Comic Book Law's KO Upheld By High Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to review a decision holding that major sections of Maryland's so-called crime comic book law are unconstitutional.

The decision was given by the Maryland Court of Appeals. It was appealed to the highest tribunal by C. Ferdinand Sybert, the State attorney general.

The Maryland statute held it unlawful to permit distribution to, or viewing by, persons under 18 of publications depicting lust, bloodshed or crime which might incite violence or depraved acts.

The law, said the Maryland court, failed to establish clear criteria for determining whether published material violated its terms. Further, it said the statute violated the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and press.

Sybert's appeal referred to "the influence of these vicious and corrupt publications" on impressionable minds of children. He said the Maryland Legislature found that persons publishing and distributing the books do so with full knowledge and intent that they will be sold to children.

"Obscenity statutes are not an invasion of, but a legitimate exception to the rights of free speech and press," the appeal asserted.

Sybert asked the high tribunal to reconsider a 1948 decision in what is known as the Winters case. In that case the court struck down a New York anti-smut law on the ground it was so indefinite in defining obscenity that it violated book sellers' rights to due process of law. To avoid prosecution, the court said, a seller might limit his own freedom of speech out of super-caution.

"Since the Winters decision," said Sybert's appeal, "the distribution of (obscene) material has increased each year until now it is one of the most important problems the cities, statutes and the country are faced with, especially in regard to minors."

Another section of the act ruled invalid provided an exemption for newspapers, this being held discriminatory against other types of publications.

The suit against the act was filed in Maryland by Siegel Enterprises, Inc., and Charles Book Center of Baltimore.

Maryland News In Brief

BALTIMORE (AP) — Investigators found $3,146 in cash sewn in the clothing of a woman whose body was recovered Sunday in the Paltimore harbor. The woman, identified as Mrs. Olga Bobrick, 72, had been reported missing Saturday by a neighbor.

The cause of death was not immediately determined.

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Two additional cases of paralytic polio, one of them fatal, were added to the 1960 toll of the disease in Baltimore County Monday.

Dr. William H. F. Warthen, county health officer, said a 19-year-old girl who had received no anti-polio innoculations was stricken last week. In addition, a 12-year-old county boy who died suddenly while visiting in Virginia, he said, was found to have been suffering from polio even though he had received four vaccine shots.

The cases raised to 14 the number of confirmed cases reported in Baltimore County this year, year, compared with two in the same period a year ago.

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — A hearing for two men charged with receiving up to $100,000 worth of airplane parts stolen from the Air Force was postponed Monday until Dec. 12.

U.S. Commissioner Samuel W. H. Moley granted the postponement after a defense attorney asked more time to subpoena a witness.

FBI agents last week arrested Dennis Ronley Conner, 37, and Donald R. Owens, 32, his brother-in-law. Both live in La Plata. Conner operates the Aqualand at Morgantown, and the Southern Trail Casino at Newburg. Owens operated the 301 Ranch at Waldorf.

The FBI said the airplane parts were stolen from the Aero Club at the Rose Valley Airport near Friendly, Md. The club is operated by the Air Force to encourage interest in flying by military personnel and civilians.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board Monday postponed until Jan. 16 the date on which Capital Airlines must improve service between eight cities and Baltimore. The board said the stay was necessary in view of the scheduling and service problems connected with the approaching holiday season.

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Spec. 5 Robert H. DeFrancesco, a 43-year-old Army man stationed at a Niki base near here, was fatally injured Sunday when he was struck by a car. State Police said DeFrancesco, a native of Hazleton, Pa., was walking across U.S. 50 when he was hit.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two separate burglaries over the weekend netted more than $10,000 in cash and jewels, police reported Monday.

Jewelry valued at more than $5,000 was taken from a dresser drawer in the home of David R. Owen, a Baltimore attorney. The loot included a horseshoe-shaped diamond pin, a diamond and ruby bracelet, a diamond and ruby ring, three pins and a string of pearls.

A tavern in Baltimore Highlands was the site of a second burglary in which $5,500 in cash was stolen. Another $2,000 worth of checks also was removed from a safe.

Woman, Child Die In Parkersburg Fire

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP)—A woman and her young granddaughter died Monday in a fire that swept the interior of a frame duplex home in North Parkersburg.

Chief Fire Inspector H. O. Neal identified the victims as Mrs. Beatrice Matheny, 59, and Sheryl Johnson, 4. They were asphyxiated.

Mrs. Ruth Johnson, mother of Sheryl, was rescued by firemen from the roof of the rear porch of the two-story dwelling. Bill Johnson, another occupant of the apartment, also escaped harm.

The other apartment in the building was not damaged.

To Acquire Assets

SYRACUSE (UPI) — Rockwell Manufacturing Co. Monday completed arrangements to acquire the Porter-Cable Machine Co.'s assets by a stock trade. Seven shares of Rockwell will be exchanged for 10 shares of Porter-Cable. Porter-Cable, which makes electric power tools, had a 20 per cent sales increase last year. It will continue under its present management.

Eggs were consumed in the United States at a rate of about 410 per person last year.

The surface of Lake Erie is approximately 570 feet above sea level.

The commission also found that the State Department of Education had projected an increased enrollment at Frostburg, Salisbury and Towson, of 2,155 students at a cost of $18,595,000, or an average of $8,628 per student.

Adding these plans together, this means an expenditure of $60,955,000 of tax funds.

The commission's proposal was projected at a cost of $49,155,000. This would serve 1,248 more students at a saving to the taxpayers of $11,800,000.

Mr. Warfield said that if college or university centers are placed within commuting distance of a student's home, it will not be necessary to invest huge sums in dormitories and dining halls.

He proposed that the question will finally come before the people in the form of a referendum, and suggested that it might be well to remember that every child in Maryland should be entitled to a higher education if he wants it.

The principal question that remains is whether these four locations should be developed into a university system governed by the board of regents of the University of Maryland or whether the state shall continue to have the centers at Frostburg, Salisbury and Towson under a board that is primarily concerned with the problem of the public school system of the state and more than half a million school children enrolled in that system, he said.

Criticism of the commissions efforts to spread education opportunity across the state, he concluded, has been in th nature of tearing down the report but not offering in its place any better solution to meet the current and future needs. Those who oppose the plan, he said, have yet to offer any clear-cut projection of costs or information that gives the citizens an opportunity to have a real understanding of the financial impact of the proposals they make.

Mr. Warfield paid tribute to William L. Wilson Jr., local attorney who served as a member of the Warfield Commission, and also praised R. Bowen Hardesty of Frostburg State, members of the local Board of Education, and the PTA for their dedication to the education of the state's young people.

He was introduced by J. Goodloe Jackson, president of the Board of Education, who was presented by Mrs. Lonnie Kyle of Flintstone, program chairman.

High School Principals Meet Today

"Education at the Crossroads — Which Direction Shall We Take?" will be the theme of a meeting this afternoon of Allegany County public high school principals and supervisors of secondary education.

Richard T. Rizer, assistant superintendent of public schools, said the discussion will include an analysis of viewpoints of Admiral Hyman Rickover and other critics of American education. There will be special emphasis on implications for secondary education.

The meeting will begin at 1:30 p. m. at the Board of Education building on Washington Street.

Joseph Pellerzi, principal of Oldtown High School, will present the admiral's views, and Kenneth E. Sheetz, principal of Bruce High School, will give his reactions as high school principal to points of view expressed.

Dr. W. Ardell Haines, principal of Allegany High School, will select major challenges that are brought out by the two previous reports and offer recommendations for modifying, expending or initiating changes in the present high school programs.

Miss Ruth C. McColly, home economics supervisor in county schools, will discuss problems of teacher education. She will evaluate current teaching training programs in the terms of academic needs and professional needs.

Proposals Made For Traffic Light Systems

If the State Roads Commission approves the plan and type of equipment to be installed, the intersections at Fifth Street and Laing Avenues will have traffic lights soon.

Police and Fire Commissioner Philmore Fleming came up with a possible solution to the plan today and Street Commissioner John J. Long chipped in with one of his own as Fleming tabbed the lights a "must" to protect pedestrians in the South End area.

Fleming said about a month ago, council had passed plans calling for widening of North Mechanic Street which would cost approximately $10,000. It has been found that this work can not be done until next spring or summer.

Fleming suggested the street work money be used for the lights and the street project be included in the special projects fund in the next budget.

Commissioner Long said it might be possible to make a part payment on the lights and arrange with the successful bidder to pay the remainder later, or after the next budget has been set.

Low bidder on the project is Queen City Electric Company which has bid $12,900.

Fleming said there is $5,105 on hand from an original light appropriation from which repairs to the Dingle and Williams Street lights were paid. That leaves an amount of about $7,800 to be raised for the South End lights.

Mayor J. Edwin Keech in backing Fleming's plan said if the North Mechanic Street project must be delayed, he could not think of any better way to spend the money.

Fleming said he believed the lights would meet specifications of the SRC but that he would check to make sure. City Attorney William R. Carscaden suggested any agreement be in writing and Fleming said he would check with the SRC and if necessary will delay the work until he gets an answer.

Lights could be installed within 90 days, Fleming said.

The South Cumberland Business and Civic Association last week met with council to urge action on a lighting system. Spokesmen cited the traffic hazards and danger to pedestrians, particularly elderly people and children, and expressed the fear some one will be killed or seriously injured.

Fleming said cross walks had been painted at the intersection and stop signs had been used previously but all merely served to emphasize the need for signal lights.

Integration Figures Up

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A total of 195,625 of more than 3 million Negro students are attending integrated schools in 17 southern and border states, it was reported Monday.

Southern School News, the monthly publication of the Southern education reporting service said the figure was an increase of 14,605 over last year.

City Wants Property Put In Condition

The City of Cumberland yesterday asked Louis Waingold, Braddock Road, to put property at the intersection of Baltimore and Mechanic streets in better condition.

City Solicitor William R. Carscaden wrote Mr. Waingold that the Mayor and Council has had complaints in connection with the "deplorable" condition of the lot.

The walls of the structure left standing, the walls of other adjacent structures and the condition of the lot in general "constitute an eyesore," the city solicitor said.

He added that within the next few weeks, Cumberland will have many shoppers in its trading area and it is to the best interests of the city that "we put our best foot forward."

Several loads of fill were hauled to the demolition area yesterday, and a grader was busy late yesterday afternoon smoothing the surface of the property.

Mr. Waingold wants to open a temporary parking lot at the corner, but the Mayor and Council said yesterday no action will be taken until he complies with usual procedures.

Apparently from conversation before council yesterday, Waingold had received an occupancy permit for the property which formerly was the site of the Olympia Hotel. When he received the occupancy permit, Waingold proceeded to tear down the building. In the interim, he did not file for a license to operate a parking lot which must be approved by the Mayor and Council on recommendation of the Planning and Zoning Commission. Applications are made in writing on forms supplied by the city clerk's office.

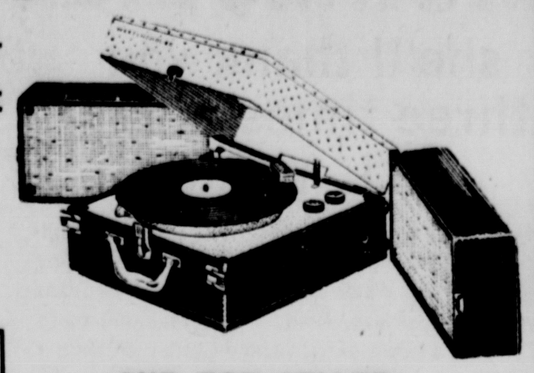

Waingold told council he had been told he could not have a used car lot at the downtown site but that he could open a parking lot. He said he had proceeded on the strength of the permit (occupancy) that he had received.

Elks Remember Deceased Members

"The ties of love which bind us to our brothers are not broken but are welded stronger in the knowledge that they have entered their true country and have found peace with God," Rev. John U. Lyness, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church told an audience of nearly 200 at the annual memorial service of BPO Elks Lodge 63 Sunday in the lodge room.

Speaking beside a palm and flower bedecked altar on which reposed a solemn and impressive tribute to 12 members of the lodge who had died in the past year, Father Lyness said that just as surely as spring will follow fall, just as surely "We can reach across the hallowed grave in happy union with our departed dead. Our fraternal charity can discover to us the way of fruitful remembrance. Our love for them need not be stilled by the clods of earth which seem to separate us so finally, the living and the dead. For life is not taken away by death, but only changed. The house of our earthly dwelling is destroyed but an eternal dwelling in Heaven is obtained. The ties of love which bind us to our brothers are not broken, but are welded stronger in the knowledge that they have entered their true country and have found peace with God."

Father Lyness said the dead do not really die but have gone ahead. Recollections of them are like letters sent from "our true home to us in exile. We make our way toward them assuredly; and they, who have already arrived, encourage us to persevere. We hear with them the sound of eternal music. They place themselves before us once again that we should remember to be like them; living even while on earth, before the face of God and striving to inherit and enjoy with them the full and endless life in our Father's Home in Heaven."

Eulogist was City Attorney William R. Carscaden, a member of the lodge. Carscaden said that "The record of no man's life is worth preserving unless it pictures something good and this good is reflected through friendship. The careers of our departed brothers exemplify the true meaning of friendship and their deeds will live on; their names will be kept green and our memories of them will be beloved. x x x Our 12 departed brothers exemplified friendship in their lives and if we could put the principles upon which they based their daily conduct into general observance, we would have the solution of not only the nation's, but the world's troubles," Carscaden said.

Officers in charge of Exalted Ruler Paul G. Stakem led the membership tribute, each passing before the altar to leave a floral tribute. Background and choral music was by the choir of Centre Street Methodist Church, directed by Dr. Charles I. Sager, with Mrs. Robert Gormer as accompanist.

The altar, covered with white satin and decorated by palms and white and yellow "mums" formed the background for a huge plaque with "Elks 63" in white letters on a blue background. As Secretary James E. Yarnall called the names of the deceased, the panels of the "Elks" plaque were parted to reveal the first or nicknames of the dead. As each was called, one of four young choir-robed girls, removed the placard from the honor roll and another placed a white "mum" in a vase at either side of the altar. Then as the "chimes of memory" sounded, a placard containing the theme of the tableau "Peace Eternal" and names of the deceased members, rose slowly in back of the altar.

Girls taking part in the tableau were Diane Morton, Frances Hughes, Barbara Hankins and Mary Jo Bedinger.

George A. Caswell was chairman of the memorial committee composed of George E. Zegles, Harry E. Thomas and Harry S. Tracy.

Honored were deceased members R. Schell Miller, Walter R. Alderton, Thomas E. Kearney, Elmer C. Emerick, Joseph M. Miller, John B. Stevens, Clarence F. Schafer, David Miller, Russell I. Reynolds, James C. Reed, Leslie O. Gilliand and Somerville Nicholson.

Continued Study Of Space Law Problems Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- An American Bar Foundation report said Sunday that space is a "vast, sharable resource" to which no nation has exclusive rights.

Sooner or later, the report said, space law must come to grips with the problem of what space activities should be discouraged or prohibited.

It added, however, that "a detailed and comprehensive code, or convention, to govern the use of outer space would seem to be premature and might even be harmful today."

It recommended that scholars and governments continue to study the problems of space law as the new frontier unfolds, until the time comes when the possible uses of space become more clear.

The report was prepared for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) which made it public with the statement that it "is not a statement of NASA policy." It was written mainly by Profs. Leon Lipson of the Yale Law School and Nicholas DeB. Katzenbach of the University of Chicago Law School.

NASA General Counsel Johr A. Johnson said the report is the most comprehensive analysis of international thinking on space law yet prepared. He called it "an excellent point of departure for further study."

Both Johnson and the authors of the report said legal scholars appear to agree unanimously that national sovereignty does not continue indefinitely into space above a country.

In the three years since the birth of the space age, neither Russia nor the United States has sought permission to launch satellites and no nation over which satellites have passed has made any protest.

This, Johnson suggested, means that a rule of international law already has taken shape, a rule that says territorial sovereignty ends somewhere around the altitudes where satellite orbits begin.

The United States also has proposed international agreement that the moon and other "celestial bodies are not subject to national appropriation by any claims of sovereignty."

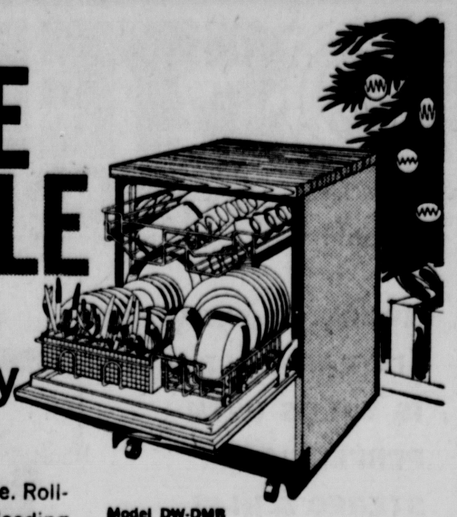

The report said repeatedly that its authors were making no recommendations. But it said the nations eventually will have to deal with such problems as liability for misfired or runaway rockets, retrieval of satellites and astronauts which accidentally come down on foreign soil, "conservation of space" to keep it from being cluttered with junk, and "control of weather control."

Elks Remember Deceased Members

"The ties of love which bind us to our brothers are not broken but are welded stronger in the knowledge that they have entered their true country and have found peace with God," Rev. John U. Lyness, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church told an audience of nearly 200 at the annual memorial service of BPO Elks Lodge 63 Sunday in the lodge room.

Speaking beside a palm and flower bedecked altar on which reposed a solemn and impressive tribute to 12 members of the lodge who had died in the past year, Father Lyness said that just as surely as spring will follow fall, just as surely "We can reach across the hallowed grave in happy union with our departed dead. Our fraternal charity can discover to us the way of fruitful remembrance. Our love for them need not be stilled by the clods of earth which seem to separate us so finally, the living and the dead. For life is not taken away by death, but only changed. The house of our earthly dwelling is destroyed but an eternal dwelling in Heaven is obtained. The ties of love which bind us to our brothers are not broken, but are welded stronger in the knowledge that they have entered their true country and have found peace with God."

Father Lyness said the dead do not really die but have gone ahead. Recollections of them are like letters sent from "our true home to us in exile. We make our way toward them assuredly; and they, who have already arrived, encourage us to persevere. What Heaven is, we can scarcely fathom, but with them we know we shall be in our true country, our native land. As they come to us in the touches of memory, we breathe with them again a native air. We hear with them the sound of eternal music. They place themselves before us once again that we should remember to be like them; living even while on earth, before the face of God and striving to inherit and enjoy with them the full and endless life in our Father's Home in Heaven."

Eulogist was City Attorney William R. Carscaden, a member of the lodge. Carscaden said that "The record of no man's life is worth preserving unless it pictures something good and this good is reflected through friendship. The careers of our departed brothers exemplify the true meaning of friendship and their deeds will live on; their names will be kept green and our memories of them will be beloved. x x x Our 12 departed brothers exemplified friendship in their lives and if we could put the principles upon which they based their daily conduct into general observance, we would have the solution of not only the nation's, but the world's troubles," Carscaden said.

The Russians And The U.N. Budget

Russians don't worry about balancing the national budget. Under their system, what the government spends is extracted from the citizen in the form of reduced consumption. But they are not averse to appealing to the free world's sense of fiscal sanity to get something they want.

That is what they are doing in the United Nations. They want UN troops out of the Congo so they can move in. So they demand withdrawal of the UN forces as an "urgent" step to save the UN from financial collapse and bankruptcy.

The UN's budget, even when the extraordinary expenses of the Congo operations are added, is minuscule compared to the national budgets of either Russia or the United States.

But Russia has refused to pay her share. If she is worried about the UN's becoming bankrupt, she can help avert that catastrophe by paying not only what she owes with respect to the Congo operations but also the modest sums she has been assessed for the business of many of the UN's permanent agencies.

The United States, on a formula based partly on national wealth and ability to pay, contributes almost one-third of UN costs. Russia is supposed to, but doesn't, contribute slightly more than one-eighth.

If she wants to show her concern for the UN's fiscal condition, there is no better way for her to do so than by starting to pay her modest share.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Paul Robeson Speaks

Paul Robeson is a singer. He is also a Negro and an ardent Communist supporter. There are many singers and many Negroes, but they do not go all over the world making speeches against the United States. Paul Robeson chooses to do that. He chooses to spew hate against his own country. That is, of course, his right. Anyone may hate the United States who chooses to do so, but what does the United States do about it? Apparently, the Government of the United States takes no notice, although we do maintain an agency, the U.S.I.A., to give this country a good name.

The fact that Paul Robeson can sing "Ol' Man River" better than anyone else can, does not warrant his going down to Australia and saying this:

". . . Robeson said that if there was a war between Russia and America he would be on the side of the Soviet Union, 'who would win — and should win.' "

This seems to me to be pretty close to treason. He also said:

"Everywhere I go I tell people—'Over there is the United States — and there are still slaves in America.' "

Of course, that is a lie and Paul Robeson is a liar. Often I hear some say of a person: "He is not a politician; he is an artist." But the fact is that he talks politics as Robeson always talks politics. Robeson has devoted his life to being an anti-American propagandist. However, he travels on an American passport. He does not travel on a Russian passport although he does Russia's ugly work against his country. Robeson himself said:

"I'm here for a concert tour. I'll stand up there and sing all night for 'em if they want me.

"But I'm much more than an entertainer. Sitting here now, I'm not a singer. I'm Paul Robeson, American Negro, and I'm entitled to state my views without fearing anyone."

But he was not hired for his views. He was hired to sing songs. He sings songs beautifully; his views are mostly lying propaganda, wild hate for his native land, bitterness because he could not sing Otello in the Metropolitan Opera House. Furthermore, if his beloved Russia accepted him as a citizen, he could not state his views without fearing anyone.

There was a time when the State Department with greater wisdom than the Supreme Court, refused to give Robeson a passport to travel the Earth doing damage to this country. This country is spending a fortune in an effort to establish a favorable image throughout the world. This man, knowing that people will listen to his nonsense because they want to hear him sing, was unable to leave this country. Then the Supreme Court made it possible for any Communist or America-hater to travel on an American passport and Congress has failed to pass an adequate act defining the passport and stating who is entitled to one. So Paul Robeson goes down to Australia and says:

"I was a $100,000 a year man before they took away my passport. In the next year I earned $2,000. But money is nothing. My father was a slave and I was born poor. I have my voice and fortunately it lasted through those eight years."

When asked whether he was bitter, Robeson answered:

"I'd just like to knock the whole lot of 'em down the stairs and walk right over 'em. When I was playing football if a fellow hurt me I wasn't bitter. I just waited my chance to knock him over and stomp right on his face."

Paul Robeson knows what he is doing. He said: "Everywhere I go people know me just because of my singing and because they know me they listen to me. Last year in Paris I was able to stand right up in the street and point my finger and say: "Over there is America, and there are still slaves in the South. Oh, yes, they listened to me."

One can understand Robeson's dedication to his race, but it is impossible to forgive his untruthful denunciation of his country in the interest of our national enemy. He is a self-proclaimed enemy of the United States. It is difficult to understand why a man who despises a country insists upon being a citizen of it.

'Aren't There Any Angels With Right Wings?'

Post-Election Analysis Of The 'Catholic Vote'

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — Polls taken after the Presidential election confirm the polls made prior to the election as to the big shift of Catholic voters from the Republican to the Democratic Party. Likewise, there was a shift, but of lesser proportions, as Protestant Democrats voted the Republican ticket.

Dr. George Gallup's organization conducted interviews in all parts of the country. Some 62 per cent of the Catholics in various states, interviewed after the election, who said they had voted Republican in 1956 declared they had voted Democratic this time.

Looking at the Catholic vote as a whole, the Democrats got 56 per cent of the total in 1952, and 51 per cent in 1956, but the figure went up by 27 percentage points to 78 in 1960. No other religious group showed a switch of that proportion.

The Republicans, who had 44 per cent of the Catholics in 1952 and 49 per cent in 1956, found themselves with only 22 per cent in 1960.

It is significant that the Republican ticket got more Catholics in the professional and business groups, where the percentage went up to 31 for Nixon, whereas among the lower-income groups and farmers the Nixon percentage of Catholic voters went down to around 16 per cent.

Summing it up, the Gallup post-election poll finds that 97 per cent of the Catholics who had voted for Stevenson in 1956 supported Kennedy. As for the Catholics who had voted for Eisenhower four years ago, 62 per cent went for Kennedy and only 38 per cent for Nixon.

A separate analysis has been made by John H. Fenton, professor of government at the University of Massachusetts. He was by error referred to in these dispatches recently as being the managing editor of the Gallup organization, who happens to have the same name. Professor Fenton has had considerable experience in election studies and is the author of a book published earlier this year titled "The Catholic Vote." In that book, written before Kennedy was nominated, the primary elections were analyzed as follows:

"The results showed clearly that Kennedy's religious faith was not a handicap but, on the contrary, a notable asset."

After the election, in a lecture delivered at Skidmore College, Mr. Fenton divided the states — except Mississippi, Hawaii and Alaska — according to the latest census figures on Catholic population and got the following result in analyzing the 1960 election results:

Catholic per. Of State Population	No. of States		Demo. per. Gain. 1960 Over 1956
9 per cent or less	14	Up	1.4 per cent
10 to 19 per cent	14	Up	5.2 per cent
20 to 29 per cent	9	Up	7.3 per cent
30 to 39 per cent	7	Up	15 per cent
40 per cent or more	3	Up	16.8 per cent

The higher the Catholic percentage in each state's population, the greater was the Democratic gain over 1956. The same thing happened in the counties in New York State, for which a similar compilation was made on the basis of the Catholic population in each.

Professor Fenton points out also that in Nelson County, Kentucky, which is about half Catholic, four precincts largely Baptist gave Nixon 65 per cent of the total vote, but in the five precincts predominantly Catholic in the same county Kennedy got 88 per cent of the total.

The religious issue certainly worked both ways in the election, but it appears that, on balance, Kennedy was helped more than hurt by it. There is no telling, however, what would have happened in the South if the Democratic Party's nominees for Congress and local offices had not used their influence to keep a large number of Democrats in line despite the religious issue. Had the Democratic organizations refrained, as they did in some states, from putting on the pressure, some of the Southern states would have gone Republican because of the religious issue. As it was, Kennedy lost only Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia whereas, when Al Smith ran in 1928, he lost also both Texas and North Carolina.

Had these two states, with their total of 38 electoral votes, gone Republican this time, it would have given Nixon 261 and Kennedy 262, whereas 269 are needed for election. The 14 "unpledged" electors in Mississippi and Alabama then would have had the balance of power and could have cast the decisive votes in the Electoral College or could have thrown the election into the House of Representatives, where each state delegation has one vote, and the outcome would again have been uncertain.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

MODERATION — The nation's capital, along with the rest of the country, is anxiously wondering about the shape of the new Kennedy administration. But — unlike the nation — some people in Washington are trying to do something about it.

That's what's behind all the discussions in the press and elsewhere about whether or not Sen. John F. Kennedy received a "mandate" from the voters to carry out his platform and campaign pledges, despite the extremely narrow margin by which he won.

Those who oppose principal parts of his program argue that Kennedy, as President, must remember that half of the voters didn't want the extreme changes he advocated. Those who support the incoming President contend that he won the election and is bound to make his best effort to accomplish the things he claimed must be done.

Kennedy, incidentally, adheres to the latter view. He claims that while the victory was narrow, the responsibility is clear.

Meanwhile, Washington officials in a position to do so, are doing their utmost to spread the view that the narrow Presidential vote was actually a vote for moderation in government activities.

This view is heady stuff to returning Republican and Southern Democratic legislators. Leaders of these legislative blocs in both Houses of Congress see themselves as the real controlling factor in the course of government.

There are some signs that they are at least partially winning their battle. Such powerful Democratic leaders as House Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, now say that the nation does not require precipitate action, as during the first 100 days of the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration 28 years ago.

Ike-Kennedy Meeting Recalls 1932 Conference Of Hoover And FDR

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON— It has been 28 years since a Democratic administration took over from a Republican administration, and, in a reverse way, history is repeating.

It has been 28 years almost to the week since an incoming Democratic President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, sat down for a conference with an outgoing Republican President, Herbert Hoover, as John Kennedy is doing with President Eisenhower today. The contrasts and similarities are interesting.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round column was born shortly before Roosevelt conferred with Hoover, and the column of December 1, 1932 carried this lead:

"Britain, which once financed the world, is in a bad way. That is the biggest thing worrying President Hoover. All the foreign agencies of the State Department, the Treasury, and the Commerce Department have been trying to find out just how badly off Britain is. They report that at times the British Treasury has been down almost to its last pound.

"The British situation was one of the things discussed extensively at the Hoover-Roosevelt debt conference."

At the Kennedy-Eisenhower conference today the dollar situation of the United States is the biggest thing worrying President Eisenhower. The United States, "which once financed the world," is believed by him to be in a bad way, dollar-wise. In 28 years —in only one generation — the pendulum has swung forward to see the United States replace Britain as the leader of the world, then swung back to see us, like the British 28 years ago, looking to our allies for financial help.

Tears In His Eyes

The fact that this is worrying President Eisenhower was evident when he interrupted his golf in Augusta last month to confer with Secretary of the Treasury Anderson. Actually Anderson had been worried about the dollar drainage ever since last summer, but kept his mouth shut for fear of showing that U. S. prestige was slipping. In the little room over the golf pro's shop at Augusta, however, he became almost emotional as he described the dollar drainage to the outgoing President.

Dr. Howard Snyder, the President' physician, said there were tears in both men's eyes as they discussed the crisis. Later, the President took the unusual step of calling a conference on the edge of the golf course to announce the recall of American GI families.

So the dollar drainage is bound to be discussed between him and President-elect Kennedy today.

There are some other contrasts between today and the Hoover-Roosevelt meeting 28 years ago. Hoover, the Republican, had taken the initiative in calling the conference. Roosevelt, the Democrat, was reluctant, didn't like the outgoing President. Today, it's the 70-year-old Eisenhower who doesn't like the incoming 43-year-old Democrat, feels bitter over Kennedy's charges that the USA has lost prestige. And it was Eisenhower who has delayed the somewhat distasteful task of seeing Kennedy.

FDR Left Town

In 1932, the situation was reversed. Here is how I reported the historic meeting between Roosevelt and Hoover 28 years ago:

"The President talked at great length. His voice was a monotone, at times plaintive. The President-elect listened. Occasionally the President paused, waiting for his hearer to reply. The President-elect said nothing. Finally Mr. Hoover said:

" 'Now, Governor Roosevelt, I wonder if I could speak to you alone.' "Raymond Moley, grave, long-faced Columbia professor, closest Roosevelt adviser, withdrew. With him went chubby-faced, rotund Ogden Livingstone Mills, Secretary of the Treasury.

"What then transpired between the two men who had fought each other for four months for the highest office in the world is not completely known. One question, however, was immediate action regarding Britain's desperate situation. Hoover wanted Roosevelt's cooperation on this. Roosevelt implied: 'It's your baby.'

"Coming out of the White House later, Governor Roosevelt told Moley: 'We're not going back. I don't want to get mixed up in this.'

"Mr. Hoover had suggested that Roosevelt come to the White House the next day to lunch with him and Mrs. Hoover. Almost immediately it was announced that the Roosevelt train would leave at 2 p. m.

"Special emissary Ogden Mills panted up to the Roosevelt suite in the Mayflower next morning. He said the President was expecting the President-elect for a further talk. He was insistent. The President-elect replied that he had heard and learned everything—there was nothing more to be said. He looked over the Hoover debt statement which Mills brought him and caught his train."

That ended that. There was no more cooperation between the outgoing Republican President and the incoming Democratic President-elect, solely because Roosevelt didn't want it. This time the incoming Democratic President has a different approach.

'The Law Is A Ass'

By John Crosby

"If the law supposes that," said Mr. Bumble, ". . . the law is a ass, a idiot." Aaah, how Charles Dickens would have rumbled with a mixture of glee and wrath had he read Chief Judge Lumbard's decision reversing the conviction of the apalachin mobsters.

Seventy-five mobsters, most with unsavory records, were gathered at the home of Joseph Barbara in Apalachin when the New York State Police—entirely by accident—stumbled on this assembly of hoodlums, including some of the top members of the underworld, and their limousines and their bodyguards and their chauffeurs. The mobsters scattered in panic, some of them fleeing through the woods. Rounded up, they insisted they were simply visiting a sick friend, Mr. Barbara. Nothing had been planned. There was no meeting.

Patently, they were all lying since elaborate preparations and complicated travel arrangements had been made. They were indicted for conspiracy to obstruct justice and they were convicted by a jury in Federal Judge Irving Kaufman's court in spite of clouds of expensive lawyers for the defense.

'The danger," said Judge Lumbard in his decision reversing the conviction, "of sweeping within the net of such a conspiracy an innocent visitor whose honestly told story may in its omissions have coincided with some falsehood told by others calls for special precautions in this type of case."

His concern for the innocent is touching. It reminds me of Anatole France's remark: "The law in its majestic equality forbids the rich as well as the poor to sleep under bridges, to beg in the streets, and to steal bread."

Or, to rework that a little in light of Jude Lumbard's concern, the law in its majestic equality must protect innocent green grocers from being caught with seventy-four hoodlums and unjustly prosecuted. Just suppose John Q. Citizen arrived in his Chrysler Imperial with his bodyguard and his chauffeur for no more devious purpose than to play a little polo as we all do now and then. Then just suppose he takes fright when the state cops arrive through the woods with his bodyguards and his chauffeur and he tells lies because he doesn't want his wife to know he was playing polo. We must protect him from unjust harassment by police officers.

I have already said that I would like to teach a course called Virtue I in our secondary schools. I think it very important that we add a course called Common Sense I to our law schools. Today society is helpless before organized crime which has hardly lost a case in the courts except for income tax violation since Tom Dewey sent Lucky Luciano to jail.

Our lawyers, our courts, and our judges have lost sight of reality. While the country sinks in a sea of hopeless corruption, while mobsters are defended by the top legal brains in this country, Judge Lumbard worries about the hypothetical plight of a hypothetical greengrocer in a wildly improbable analogy. This touching concern for the innocent did not save an innocent woman from three years in the Tombs where she was sent by a judge so wrapped up in his dignity he couldn't see over his nose.

The law is indulging in flights of judicial fantasy. The law protects us from unfair seizure by Cardinal Richelieu's men; the law protects us from impressment in Her Majesty's Navy. The law protects us from all past tyrannies and future injustices, but the law does not protect us — or even seem to be aware of — present injustices, the tyranny of the Mafia, or the systematic robbery of the public by the immensely wealthy overlords of crime. As Clarence Darrow said in the Scopes trial, perhaps the law itself should be on trial. Judges don't deal in common sense. At least, not in this country—the only country in the world with organized crime. Judge Lumbard's concern about an innocent man blinks at the fact that innocent men don't have all those expensive lawyers who are too busy working for Frank Costello. Innocent men haven't nearly enough money to fight a case to the Court of Appeals. Only crooks and corporations (and the crooks are gradually taking over the corporations) have the funds to fight a case to the Circuit Court of Appeals where they can hear Judge Lumbard's tender concern for the innocent.

The innocent don't hear it. The innocent are in the Tombs where they have been sent by a judge who wasn't paying attention because the innocent have neither the lawyers nor the money to be worth bothering with.

What To Do About Those 'Dishpan' Hands?

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Soap and detergents are not as harmful to the skin as we have been led to believe. Many housewives with red, itching, and irritated hands should consider causes other than the dishpan when they suffer from dermatitis of the hands.

The condition often begins in the winter months or is associated with an emotional problem. Spontaneous improvement takes place when the weather becomes warmer or adjustments are made to new responsibilities. Other agents that could be blamed for skin outbreaks on the hands include bleaches, solvents, food dyes, fruit juices, metal alloys, cosmetics, and rubber gloves.

Dr. Raymond R. Suskind, of the University of Cincinnati, has studied the "dishpan" hands of more than 300 women over the last nine years. Water by itself may play a role, especially when it macerates the skin, inviting bacterial and fungal infections. Cleansing agents seldom bother the normal skin but may aggravate an existing dermatitis. This is why victims of dermatitis are advised to use cleansing cream instead of soap and water.

This advice backfired when given to a prominent radio commentator several years ago. His hands and nails developed a motheaten appearance caused presumably by ringworm or allergy. His physician said, "Absolutely no soap and water; use cleansing creams instead."

The skin remained irritated over the years despite consultations and the repeated advice, "No soap and water." Now and then there was some improvement, but usually the hands were raw, cracked, blistered, crusty, and bleeding. The nails looked like cheese.

This summer the announcer visited Scotland and returned to his hotel after a hot, dusty, busy day. He saw a large tub and decided to take a bath, using soap, even if it meant his hands would fall off. The next morning he noted improvement. He took another bath and the hands looked even better. By the end of a week of daily bathing he was cured. His conclusion: "I guess my hands were dirty all those years."

TOMORROW: Wheezing from mildew.

DRY COUGH

M. M. writes: Can a dry cough be due to cancer of the lung?

REPLY

Dry cough is a common symptom of chronic laryngitis, enlarged chest glands, tumors, foreign bodies in the bronchi, cancer of the lung, habit, or smoking. X-ray will be needed to narrow down the possibilities.

ONE OVARY

M. T. writes: Does a woman with one ovary stand only half as much chance of getting pregnant as a woman with two ovaries?

REPLY

No. One ovary does the work of two.

HYPERTENSION

M. R. writes: Is it harmful for a person with high blood pressure to exercise?

REPLY

No, provided exercise is moderate and does not produce shortness of breath or chest pain.

REDDENED PALMS

Mrs. M. writes: My palms are red most of the time. Do you have any information on this condition?

REPLY

Transient changes in the color of the skin are circulatory in origin and the diagnosis hinges on other findings, such as whether the hands are cold or warm, the occupation, and the temperament. Occasionally palmar erythema is associated with liver disease.

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

The Russians And The U.N. Budget

Russians don't worry about balancing the national budget. Under their system, what the government spends is extracted from the citizen in the form of reduced consumption. But they are not averse to appealing to the free world's sense of fiscal sanity to get something they want.

That is what they are doing in the United Nations. They want UN troops out of the Congo so they can move in. So they demand withdrawal of the UN forces as an "urgent" step to save the UN from financial collapse and bankruptcy.

The UN's budget, even when the extraordinary expenses of the Congo operations are added, is minuscule compared to the national budgets of either Russia or the United States.

But Russia has refused to pay her share. If she is worried about the UN's becoming bankrupt, she can help avert that catastrophe by paying not only what she owes with respect to the Congo operations but also the modest sums she has been assessed for the business of many of the UN's permanent agencies.

The United States, on a formula based partly on national wealth and ability to pay, contributes almost one-third of UN costs. Russia is supposed to, but doesn't, contribute slightly more than one-eighth.

If she wants to show her concern for the UN's fiscal condition, there is no better way for her to do so than by starting to pay her modest share.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Paul Robeson Speaks

Paul Robeson is a singer. He is also a Negro and an ardent Communist supporter. There are many singers and many Negroes, but they do not go all over the world making speeches against the United States. Paul Robeson chooses to do that. He chooses to spew hate against his own country. That is, of course, his right. Anyone may hate the United States who chooses to do so, but what does the United States do about it? Apparently, the Government of the United States takes no notice, although we do maintain an agency, the U.S.I.A., to give this country a good name.

The fact that Paul Robeson can sing "Ol' Man River" better than anyone else can, does not warrant his going down to Australia and saying this:

". . . Robeson said that if there was a war between Russia and America he would be on the side of the Soviet Union, 'who would win — and should win.' "

This seems to me to be pretty close to treason. He also said:

"Everywhere I go I tell people—'Over there is the United States — and there are still slaves in America.' "

Of course, that is a lie and Paul Robeson is a liar. Often I hear some say of a person: "He is not a politician; he is an artist." But the fact is that he talks politics as Robeson always talks politics. Robeson has devoted his life to being an anti-American propagandist. However, he travels on an American passport. He does not travel on a Russian passport although he does Russia's ugly work against his country. Robeson himself said:

"I'm here for a concert tour. I'll stand up there and sing all night for 'em if they want me.

"But I'm much more than an entertainer. Sitting here now, I'm not a singer. I'm Paul Robeson, American Negro, and I'm entitled to state my views without fearing anyone."

But he was not hired for his views. He was hired to sing songs. He sings songs beautifully; his views are mostly lying propaganda, wild hate for his native land, bitterness because he could not sing Otello in the Metropolitan Opera House. Furthermore, if his beloved Russia accepted him as a citizen, he could not state his views without fearing anyone.

There was a time when the State Department with greater wisdom than the Supreme Court, refused to give Robeson a passport to travel the Earth doing damage to this country. This country is spending a fortune in an effort to establish a favorable image throughout the world. This man, knowing that people will listen to his nonsense because they want to hear him sing, was unable to leave this country. Then the Supreme Court made it possible for any Communist or America-hater to travel on an American passport and Congress has failed to pass an adequate act defining the passport and stating who is entitled to one. So Paul Robeson goes down to Australia and says:

"I was a $100,000 a year man before they took away my passport. In the next year I earned $2,000. But money is nothing. My father was a slave and I was born poor. I have my voice and fortunately it lasted through those eight years."

When asked whether he was bitter, Robeson answered:

"I'd just like to knock the whole lot of 'em down the stairs and walk right over 'em. When I was playing football if a fellow hurt me I wasn't bitter. I just waited my chance to knock him over and stomp right on his face."

Paul Robeson knows what he is doing. He said:

"Everywhere I go people know me just because of my singing and because they know me they listen to me. Last year in Paris I was able to stand right up in the street and point my finger and say:

"Over there is America, and there are still slaves in the South. Oh, yes, they listened to me."

One can understand Robeson's dedication to his race, but it is impossible to forgive his untruthful denunciation of his country in the interest of our national enemy. He is a self-proclaimed enemy of the United States. It is difficult to understand why a man who despises a country insists upon being a citizen of it.

Ike-Kennedy Meeting Recalls 1932 Conference Of Hoover And FDR

In 1932, the situation was reversed. Here is how I reported the historic meeting between Roosevelt and Hoover 28 years ago:

That ended that. There was no more cooperation between the outgoing Republican President and the incoming Democratic President-elect, solely because Roosevelt didn't want it. This time the incoming Democratic President has a different approach.

Post-Election Analysis Of The 'Catholic Vote'

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — Polls taken after the Presidential election confirm the polls made prior to the election as to the big shift of Catholic voters from the Republican to the Democratic Party. Likewise, there was a shift, but of lesser proportions, as Protestant Democrats voted the Republican ticket.

Dr. George Gallup's organization conducted interviews in all parts of the country. Some 62 per cent of the Catholics in various states, interviewed after the election, who said they had voted Republican in 1956 declared they had voted Democratic this time.

Looking at the Catholic vote as a whole, the Democrats got 56 per cent of the total in 1952, and 51 per cent in 1956, but the figure went up by 27 percentage points to 78 in 1960. No other religious group showed a switch of that proportion.

The Republicans, who had 44 per cent of the Catholics in 1952 and 49 per cent in 1956, found themselves with only 22 per cent in 1960.

It is significant that the Republican ticket got more Catholics in the professional and business groups, where the percentage went up to 31 for Nixon, whereas among the lower-income groups and farmers the Nixon percentage of Catholic voters went down to around 16 per cent.

Summing it up, the Gallup post-election poll finds that 97 per cent of the Catholics who had voted for Stevenson in 1956 supported Kennedy. As for the Catholics who had voted for Eisenhower four years ago, 62 per cent went for Kennedy and only 38 per cent for Nixon.

A separate analysis has been made by John H. Fenton, professor of government at the University of Massachusetts. He was by error referred to in these dispatches recently as being the managing editor of the Gallup organization, who happens to have the same name. Professor Fenton has had considerable experience in election studies and is the author of a book published earlier this year titled "The Catholic Vote." In that book, written before Kennedy was nominated, the primary elections were analyzed as follows:

"The results showed clearly that Kennedy's religious faith was not a handicap but, on the contrary, a notable asset."

After the election, in a lecture delivered at Skidmore College, Mr. Fenton divided the states — except Mississippi, Hawaii and Alaska — according to the latest census figures on Catholic population and got the following result in analyzing the 1960 election results:

Catholic per. Of State Population	No. of States		Demo. per. Gain. 1960 Over 1956
9 per cent or less	14	Up	1.4 per cent
10 to 19 per cent	14	Up	5.2 per cent
20 to 29 per cent	9	Up	7.3 per cent
30 to 39 per cent	7	Up	15 per cent
40 per cent or more	3	Up	16.8 per cent

The higher the Catholic percentage in each state's population, the greater was the Democratic gain over 1956. The same thing happened in the counties in New York State, for which a similar compilation was made on the basis of the Catholic population in each.

Professor Fenton points out also that in Nelson County, Kentucky, which is about half Catholic, four precincts largely Baptist gave Nixon 65 per cent of the total vote, but in the five precincts predominantly Catholic in the same county Kennedy got 88 per cent of the total.

The religious issue certainly worked both ways in the election, but it appears that, on balance, Kennedy was helped more than hurt by it. There is no telling, however, what would have happened in the South if the Democratic Party's nominees for Congress and local offices had not used their influence to keep a large number of Democrats in line despite the religious issue. Had the Democratic organizations refrained, as they did in some states, from putting on the pressure, some of the Southern states would have gone Republican because of the religious issue. As it was, Kennedy lost only Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia whereas, when Al Smith ran in 1928, he lost also both Texas and North Carolina.

Had these two states, with their total of 38 electoral votes, gone Republican this time, it would have given Nixon 261 and Kennedy 262, whereas 269 are needed for election. The 14 "unpledged" electors in Mississippi and Alabama then would have had the balance of power and could have cast the decisive votes in the Electoral College or could have thrown the election into the House of Representatives, where each state delegation has one vote, and the outcome would again have been uncertain.

MODERATION — The nation's capital, along with the rest of the country, is anxiously wondering about the shape of the new Kennedy administration. But — unlike the nation — some people in Washington are trying to do something about it.

That's what's behind all the discussions in the press and elsewhere about whether or not Sen. John F. Kennedy received a "mandate" from the voters to carry out his platform and campaign pledges, despite the extremely narrow margin by which he won.

Those who oppose principal parts of his program argue that Kennedy, as President, must remember that half of the voters didn't want the extreme changes he advocated. Those who support the incoming President contend that he won the election and is bound to make his best effort to accomplish the things he claimed must be done.

Kennedy, incidentally, adheres to the latter view. He claims that while the victory was narrow, the responsibility is clear.

Meanwhile, Washington officials in a position to do so, are doing their utmost to spread the view that the narrow Presidential vote was actually a vote for moderation in government activities.

This view is heady stuff to returning Republican and Southern Democratic legislators. Leaders of these legislative blocs in both Houses of Congress see themselves as the real controlling factor in the course of government.

There are some signs that they are at least partially winning their battle. Such powerful Democratic leaders as House Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, now say that the nation does not require precipitate action, as during the first 100 days of the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration 28 years ago.

By John Crosby

"If the law supposes that," said Mr. Bumble, ". . . the law is a ass, a idiot." Aaah, how Charles Dickens would have rumbled with a mixture of glee and wrath had he read Chief Judge Lumbard's decision reversing the conviction of the apalachin mobsters.

Seventy-five mobsters, most with unsavory records, were gathered at the home of Joseph Barbara in Apalachin when the New York State Police—entirely by accident—stumbled on this assembly of hoodlums, including some of the top members of the underworld, and their limousines and their bodyguards and their chauffeurs. The mobsters scattered in panic, some of them fleeing through the woods. Rounded up, they insisted they were simply visiting a sick friend, Mr. Barbara. Nothing had been planned. There was no meeting.

Patently, they were all lying since elaborate preparations and complicated travel arrangements had been made. They were indicted for conspiracy to obstruct justice and they were convicted by a jury in Federal Judge Irving Kaufman's court in spite of clouds of expensive lawyers for the defense.

'The danger," said Judge Lumbard in his decision reversing the conviction, "of sweeping within the net of such a conspiracy an innocent visitor whose honestly told story may in its omissions have coincided with some falsehood told by others calls for special precautions in this type of case."

His concern for the innocent is touching. It reminds me of Anatole France's remark: "The law in its majestic equality forbids the rich as well as the poor to sleep under bridges, to beg in the streets, and to steal bread."

Or, to rework that a little in light of Jude Lumbard's concern, the law in its majestic equality must protect innocent green grocers from being caught with seventy-four hoodlums and unjustly prosecuted. Just suppose John Q. Citizen arrived in his Chrysler Imperial with his bodyguard and his chauffeur for no more devious purpose than to play a little polo as we all do now and then. Then just suppose he takes fright when the state cops arrive through the woods with his bodyguards and his chauffeur and he tells lies because he doesn't want his wife to know he was playing polo. We must protect him from unjust harassment by police officers.

I have already said that I would like to teach a course called Virtue I in our secondary schools. I think it very important that we add a course called Common Sense I to our law schools. Today society is helpless before organized crime which has hardly lost a case in the courts except for income tax violation since Tom Dewey sent Lucky Luciano to jail.

Our lawyers, our courts, and our judges have lost sight of reality. While the country sinks in a sea of hopeless corruption, while mobsters are defended by the top legal brains in this country, Judge Lumbard worries about the hypothetical plight of a hypothetical greengrocer in a wildly improbable analogy. This touching concern for the innocent did not save an innocent woman from three years in the Tombs where she was sent by a judge so wrapped up in his dignity he couldn't see over his nose.

The law is indulging in flights of judicial fantasy. The law protects us from unfair seizure by Cardinal Richelieu's men; the law protects us from impressment in Her Majesty's Navy. The law protects us from all past tyrannies and future injustices, but the law does not protect us — or even seem to be aware of — present injustices, the tyranny of the Mafia, or the systematic robbery of the public by the immensely wealthy overlords of crime. As Clarence Darrow said in the Scopes trial, perhaps the law itself should be on trial. Judges don't deal in common sense. At least, not in this country—the only country in the world with organized crime. Judge Lumbard's concern about an innocent man blinks at the fact that innocent men don't have all those expensive lawyers who are too busy working for Frank Costello. Innocent men haven't nearly enough money to fight a case to the Court of Appeals. Only crooks and corporations (and the crooks are gradually taking over the corporations) have the funds to fight a case to the Circuit Court of Appeals where they can hear Judge Lumbard's tender concern for the innocent.

The innocent don't hear it. The innocent are in the Tombs where they have been sent by a judge who wasn't paying attention because the innocent have neither the lawyers nor the money to be worth bothering with.

What To Do About Those 'Dishpan' Hands?

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Soap and detergents are not as harmful to the skin as we have been led to believe. Many housewives with red, itching, and irritated hands should consider causes other than the dishpan when they suffer from dermatitis of the hands.

The condition often begins in the winter months or is associated with an emotional problem. Spontaneous improvement takes place when the weather becomes warmer or adjustments are made to new responsibilities. Other agents that could be blamed for skin outbreaks on the hands include bleaches, solvents, food dyes, fruit juices, metal alloys, cosmetics, and rubber gloves.

Dr. Raymond R. Suskind, of the University of Cincinnati, has studied the "dishpan" hands of more than 300 women over the last nine years. Water by itself may play a role, especially when it macerates the skin, inviting bacterial and fungal infections. Cleansing agents seldom bother the normal skin but may aggravate an existing dermatitis. This is why victims of dermatitis are advised to use cleansing cream instead of soap and water.

This advice backfired when given to a prominent radio commentator several years ago. His hands and nails developed a motheaten appearance caused presumably by ringworm or allergy. His physician said, "Absolutely no soap and water; use cleansing creams instead."

The skin remained irritated over the years despite consultations and the repeated advice, "No soap and water." Now and then there was some improvement, but usually the hands were raw, cracked, blistered, crusty, and bleeding. The nails looked like cheese.

This summer the announcer visited Scotland and returned to his hotel after a hot, dusty, busy day. He saw a large tub and decided to take a bath, using soap, even if it meant his hands would fall off. The next morning he noted improvement. He took another bath and the hands looked even better. By the end of a week of daily bathing he was cured. His conclusion: "I guess my hands were dirty all those years."

TOMORROW: Wheezing from mildew.

DRY COUGH

M. M. writes: Can a dry cough be due to cancer of the lung?

REPLY

Dry cough is a common symptom of chronic laryngitis, enlarged chest glands, tumors, foreign bodies in the bronchi, cancer of the lung, habit, or smoking. X-ray will be needed to narrow down the possibilities.

ONE OVARY

M. T. writes: Does a woman with one ovary stand only half as much chance of getting pregnant as a woman with two ovaries?

REPLY

No. One ovary does the work of two.

HYPERTENSION

M. R. writes: Is it harmful for a person with high blood pressure to exercise?

REPLY

No, provided exercise is moderate and does not produce shortness of breath or chest pain.

REDDENED PALMS

Mrs. M. writes: My palms are red most of the time. Do you have any information on this condition?

REPLY

Transient changes in the color of the skin are circulatory in origin and the diagnosis hinges on other findings, such as whether the hands are cold or warm, the occupation, and the temperament. Occasionally palmar erythema is associated with liver disease.

(Copyright 1960: The Chicago Tribune)

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Keeping Up With Hollywood
by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD—Chuck Connors, who stepped so successfully out of a baseball suit (the Hollywood Stars) into a top TV star in "The Rifleman" hasn't made a movie in a long time. But thats' going to be changed now that Chuck has signed to play the Indian in "Geronimo" for United Artsts. This is no bows-and-arrows story but a psychological study of the American Indian.

Everything about Chuck, who is blonde and very Yankee looking, will be changed. His hair will be dyed, he will wear contact lenses and even the shape of his nose will be trans ormed by make-up—so producers Jules Levy and Arthur Gardner and director Arnold Leven tell me.

Chuck is to be congratulated with the success of his "Rifleman" series which goes on and on when so many other TV programs are being dropped.

Jane Powell and Pat Nerney, excited about their own producing company Etoile Productions, told me all about their plans at the Tom May party. Far from being just a tax-deduction gleam in their eye, Jane and Pat have already bought "Two Weeks Every summer" for a movie and plan to start it in March.

"It's an original by Bob Render and is about an innocent looking but shrewd nightclub singer who gets herself booked in Honolulu every summer for the express purpose of snagging a rich tourist husband," Jane told me. She and Pat are also allowing plenty of time for Jane to continue in TV—which she loves. In fact, they leave for New York where she will discuss a new spectacular slated for April.

Bobby Darin has the best incentive in the world to accept the offer of producer Charles Brackett, to co-star with Pat Boone in "State Fair." Bobby's bride, Sandra Dee, will be here making pictures. He is wanted for the role that Dana Andrews played in the original—that of a newspaperman, but in this case Bobby becomes a TV narrator.

The only thing that could hold this up is that the picture won't roll until early spring because Walter Lang who is directing it, will have himself a vacation after he completes "Snow White and the Three Stooges" in late January. "State Fair" was to have started earlier.

All those rumors that Tony Curtis is out of "Lady L" with Gina Lollobrigida, are untrue, according to director George Cukor, who says the picture will go before the cameras right after the new year. Wilfred Hyde - White possibly will play one of the top roles. He's remaining here until after the birth of his baby, and since he was in "Let's Make Love" George is eager to get him for a second picture.

I asked George about Marilyn Monroe. He said he is one director who will not refuse to use her in a picture.

Marilyn's a dedicated actress," George said, "and is not putting on an act when she is late on a set or isn't felling well. She will make a scene over and over again until it's right."

Such faith Buck McGowan has in "No Time To Cry", the story of a 12-year-old Hungarian girl's escape to Free Europe, that he put every dime from the sale of his La Brea Avenue studios into the picture. Plans are now in motion for Radio Free Europe to sponsor the United States premiere of the picture. Buck said Radio Free Europe requested special permission for broadcast material as an inspiration of courage to the peoples of Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Rumania.

"However," said Buck, "great care has to be taken in the selection of material because Radio Free Europe isn't encouraging escape. Nine out of ten of these attempts end up in death or imprisonment." Buck was formerly with "Death Valley Days."

Included in the odds and ends: a racetrack program and a set of false teeth.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Christmas will be here before we know it. This means I will soon be getting several phone calls from well-meaning mothers. (I have four children in school.) They will say this year (as they did last year) "Please send a dollar or more to school with Barbara. All the children are getting together to buy Miss Thomas a nice Christmas gift."

When I went to school, the children brought a handkerchief, or a box of homemade cookies to the teacher at Christmas. It was done on a voluntary basis — and the teacher seemed thrilled at the small remembrances.

It so happens we can afford the "contribution," but I resent being put on the spot, I feel it is unfair to children whose families have less or nothing to give. Even in these days of prosperity, some mothers find it difficult to scrape up five dollars for five homeroom teachers.

I wonder if other parents share my views. I hope pressure can be brought to put an end to this unchristian Christmas practice.
—MOTHER OF FOUR

DEAR MOTHER: Thank you for your excellent letter. The envelope indicates that you live in Carbondale, Illinois. You'll be happy to know that in many cities, the kids are still bringing handkerchiefs and boxes of homemade cookies. And I agree it's definitely the better way.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a happy bachelor who has been clever enough to avoid all the well-known traps contrived by females whose object is, of course, matrimony.

By nature the male animal was intended to roam free and unfettered wherever his fancies lead him. He was not meant to settle with one mate. All lower forms of life operate this way—instinctively—and if the truth were known, a great many of the so-called "higher" animals operate this way, too.

The female, however, needs the security of a home and a man she can call her own. She has neither the desire nor the need for freedom unlimited. Females need the moral support that marriage offers. In other words, marriage is designed strictly for women.

I challenge you to show me where I'm wrong.—ATLAS

DEAR ATLAS: Your thesis is lovely—but if men are meant to be single and unfettered, and women are meant to be married, who are the women supposed to marry?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband's niece is 23 years old. She was sent by her mother to live with us last August.

My husband has taken entirely too much interest in her to suit me. He drives her to and from work every day and takes her to public dances twice a week. He says she's just a kid who wants to have some fun. He also claims he'd rather have her going to public dances with "Ol' Unk" than all by herself. What is your opinion of this?—OL' AUNTIE

DEAR AUNTIE: A girl 23 is no kid. She's a grown woman. Tell "Ol' Unk" to introduce her to some gentlemen her own age and stop trying to kid the troops. And I suggest you help her find a nice room someplace—as soon as possible.

To learn the knack of feeling comfortable with the opposite sex, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Date Bait," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

W. Va. Budget Sessions See Huge Requests

University Seeks Over 12 Millions

By CARLO J. SALZANO
United Press International

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—West Virginia University started the State Board of Public Works on a week-long budget session Monday by requesting a 1961-62 operating budget of $12.3 million, an increase of some $4 million over its current appropriation.

The various agencies submitted budget requests totaling $192,620,533 but State Finance Director Henry L. Ash chopped that by more than $78,000,000, recommending a general revenue operating budget of $114,454,029.

Only one of five spending agencies heard by the board Monday, the State Department of Archives and History, asked for no increase over its current appropriation, $44,490.

Two other spending units, Bluefield State College and the State Geological and Economic Survey, told the board that their needs are directly related to West Virginia's efforts at industrial development.

And, former Gov. Homer A. Holt, speaking in behalf of a $1,194,560 general revenue budget request for the State Conservation Commission, said the department is so low on forest fire fighting funds that two bad seasons would "put them out of business."

More Brain-Power Needed

Stahr, who also told the board the university has a backlog of $18 million in new building needs, said WVU needs a bigger operating budget to meet the requirements of "technological explosions."

"Such explosions increase the need in West Virginia for higher development of trained brain power," Stahr said.

He stressed the need for money for library books and for an additional $530,623 to raise faculty salaries by 10 per cent. He also noted the budget includes $300,000 to operate the new Evansdale agricultural and engineering campus for the first time starting next July 1.

State Geologist Paul Price told the board his current $204,900 budget needs a $94,000 increase to handle the needs of prospective industrialists scouring the state for new business possibilities.

And, Ned Shott of Bluefield, appearing in behalf of Bluefield State College, said the school is "ideally situated in the center of depressed areas, in the heart of the hard - pressed southern coal fields, but needs additional facilities to train young unemployed people for new jobs."

Shott said if the board denies the school's request for a new $800,000 science building that four years from now the school will be graduating people "with no chance for a job."

Forestry Needs Cited

You will have new industry, yes, but if you have to import labor you haven't helped," Shott said. "West Virginians will have to sit on the sidelines waving at imported labor going to work while they themselves eat doled-out food."

Conservation Director Warden Lane stressed his forestry program as needing the greatest financial attention. In fact, he said, he was forced to ask the board for a $100,000 supplemental appropriation to carry out his nursery and forestry programs for the rest of this fiscal year.

State Parole Board Chairman John S. Holy asked for money to hire, among others, seven new parole officers in an effort to find jobs for some 600 inmates who could be released on parole if they had jobs.

In recommending a total general revenue budget similar to this fiscal year, Ash said he could do nothing but base his studies on revenue estimates for the 1961-62 fiscal year.

Ash said it would be up to the 1961 legislature to provide expanded services and for such programs as the new medical care and STEP, programs if it wishes to extend them beyond their expiration early next year.

The only major increase recommended by Ash was $491,284 to help the State Health Department launch a local health service program in the counties.

Davis Phone Company REA Improvement Loan Is Given Final Approval

MORGANTOWN—The Rural Electrification Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture approved a loan of $1,049,000 to the United Utilities of West Virginia, Inc., Davis Tucker County, to improve telephone service for 199 subscribers and to furnish initial service for 1,565 subscribers. This was cited here today by specialists of the Agricultural Extension Service of West Virginia University.

The area to be served by this loan includes almost all of Clay county and portions of Roane and Nicholas counties. The existing subscribers now receive common battery service from the Clay Citizens Telephone Company which the borrower plans to acquire with its own funds. In addition, the borrower proposes to acquire the Pittston - Clinchfield Line in the Widen community, and four miles of line from the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia in the Birch River area.

New construction planned to serve the expanded system includes dial, central offices at Birch River, Clay, Ivydale, Newton, and Widen, and 317 miles of line. About 24 of the 61 miles of acquired line will be retained in place; 33 miles will be rebuilt for continued use, and the remainder will be retired. The Clay central office building also will house commercial office facilities. Construction is presently under way with prior REA approval in the Clay exchange. The borrower will be reimbursed for the improvement of these facilities.

REA loans to this borrower will make possible new and improved service to 6,676 subscribers in 10 counties. Three of the proposed 11 exchanges are now in operation. When complete; the system will consist of 1,178 miles of line.

West Virginia To Cooperate In Safety Plan

KEYSER — West Virginia will cooperate with the Association of State and Provincial Safety Coordinators in their international "Moral Responsibility Program" commencing December first. The objective of the program is to sell the idea that every driver has a moral responsibility to his God, his community, his family and to himself, to drive in such a manner as to guard the lives of others. "Drive by the Golden Rule — You Are Your Brother's Keeper."

Every citizen of West Virginia is invited to participate in the "Moral Responsibility Program" whatever his role may be as an official, religious leader, a teacher, club member or simply a good citizen and neighbor. It is self-evident that the more people who take an active role in the program the more successful it will be.

The program will be coordinated through the local State Police Detachments where specific suggestions and ideas for religious groups, schools, fraternal organizations, clubs and business will be available.

"If through our efforts, just one child lives who might have been killed . . . if one father returns safely home to his growing family . . . if one young mother's sight is saved, then we will know, no matter what our role has been, that our work has been worthwhile. We are each morally responsible for traffic accident prevention," officials declare.

W. Va. Budget Sessions See Huge Requests

University Seeks Over 12 Millions

By CARLO J. SALZANO
United Press International

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—West Virginia University started the State Board of Public Works on a week-long budget session Monday by requesting a 1961-62 operating budget of $12.3 million, an increase of some $4 million over its current appropriation.

The various agencies submitted budget requests totaling $192,620,533 but State Finance Director Henry L. Ash chopped that by more than $78,000,000, recommending a general revenue operating budget of $114,454,029.

Only one of five spending agencies heard by the board Monday, the State Department of Archives and History, asked for no increase over its current appropriation, $44,490.

Two other spending units, Bluefield State College and the State Geological and Economic Survey, told the board that their needs are directly related to West Virginia's efforts at industrial development.

And, former Gov. Homer A. Holt, speaking in behalf of a $1,194,560 general revenue budget request for the State Conservation Commission, said the department is so low on forest fire fighting funds that two bad seasons would "put them out of business."

More Brain-Power Needed

Stahr, who also told the board the university has a backlog of $18 million in new building needs, said WVU needs a bigger operating budget to meet the requirements of "technological explosions."

"Such explosions increase the need in West Virginia for higher development of trained brain power," Stahr said.

He stressed the need for money for library books and for an additional $530,623 to raise faculty salaries by 10 per cent. He also noted the budget includes $300,000 to operate the new Evansdale agricultural and engineering campus for the first time starting next July 1.

State Geologist Paul Price told the board his current $204,900 budget needs a $94,000 increase to handle the needs of prospective industrialists scouring the state for new business possibilities.

And, Ned Shott of Bluefield, appearing in behalf of Bluefield State College, said the school is "ideally situated in the center of depressed areas, in the heart of the hard - pressed southern coal fields, but needs additional facilities to train young unemployed people for new jobs."

Shott said if the board denies the school's request for a new $800,000 science building that four years from now the school will be graduating people "with no chance for a job."

Forestry Needs Cited

You will have new industry, yes, but if you have to import labor you haven't helped," Shott said. "West Virginians will have to sit on the sidelines waving at imported labor going to work while they themselves eat doled-out food."

Conservation Director Warden Lane stressed his forestry program as needing the greatest financial attention. In fact, he said, he was forced to ask the board for a $100,000 supplemental appropriation to carry out his nursery and forestry programs for the rest of this fiscal year.

State Parole Board Chairman John S. Holy asked for money to hire, among others, seven new parole officers in an effort to find jobs for some 600 inmates who could be released on parole if they had jobs.

In recommending a total general revenue budget similar to this fiscal year, Ash said he could do nothing but base his studies on revenue estimates for the 1961-62 fiscal year.

Ash said it would be up to the 1961 legislature to provide expanded services and for such programs as the new medical care and STEP, programs if it wishes to extend them beyond their expiration early next year.

The only major increase recommended by Ash was $491,284 to help the State Health Department launch a local health service program in the counties.

This is the meeting Barron referred to in his campaign. He said he would attempt to gain agreement among various groups on a program of progress for the state.

Barron expressed the opinion that many worthwhile proposals have died in the legislature over the years because of concerted opposition by organizations and groups which were not appraised of them before presentation.

He said he felt that if pre-legislative conferences were held at which proposals could be discussed in an informal atmosphere, much of the opposition to progressive legislation could be eliminated.

Earlier the commission had predicted the kill would be about the same as last year, or some 19,500. However, when the final, official county is completed — about Dec. 16 — the total is not expected to be above 16,000.

Davis Phone Company REA Improvement Loan Is Given Final Approval

MORGANTOWN—The Rural Electrification Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture approved a loan of $1,049,000 to the United Utilities of West Virginia, Inc., Davis Tucker County, to improve telephone service for 199 subscribers and to furnish initial service for 1,565 subscribers. This was cited here today by specialists of the Agricultural Extension Service of West Virginia University.

The area to be served by this loan includes almost all of Clay county and portions of Roane and Nicholas counties. The existing subscribers now receive common battery service from the Clay Citizens Telephone Company which the borrower plans to acquire with its own funds. In addition, the borrower proposes to acquire the Pittston - Clinchfield Line in the Widen community, and four miles of line from the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of West Virginia in the Birch River area.

New construction planned to serve the expanded system includes dial, central offices at Birch River, Clay, Ivydale, Newton, and Widen, and 317 miles of line. About 24 of the 61 miles of acquired line will be retained in place; 33 miles will be rebuilt for continued use, and the remainder will be retired. The Clay central office building also will house commercial office facilities. Construction is presently under way with prior REA approval in the Clay exchange. The borrower will be reimbursed for the improvement of these facilities.

REA loans to this borrower will make possible new and improved service to 6,676 subscribers in 10 counties. Three of the proposed 11 exchanges are now in operation. When complete, the system will consist of 1,178 miles of line.

West Virginia To Cooperate In Safety Plan

KEYSER — West Virginia will cooperate with the Association of State and Provincial Safety Coordinators in their international "Moral Responsibility Program" commencing December first. The objective of the program is to sell the idea that every driver has a moral responsibility to his God, his community, his family and to himself, to drive in such a manner as to guard the lives of others. "Drive by the Golden Rule — You Are Your Brother's Keeper."

Every citizen of West Virginia is invited to participate in the "Moral Responsibility Program" whatever his role may be as an official, religious leader, a teacher, club member or simply a good citizen and neighbor. It is self-evident that the more people who take an active role in the program the more successful it will be.

The program will be coordinated through the local State Police Detachments where specific suggestions and ideas for religious groups, schools, fraternal organizations, clubs and business will be available.

"If through our efforts, just one child lives who might have been killed . . . if one father returns safely home to his growing family . . . if one young mother's sight is saved, then we will know, no matter what our role has been, that our work has been worthwhile. We are each morally responsible for traffic accident prevention," officials declare.

How to spend your whole paycheck and save some money, too

If you have to spend your whole paycheck, but don't like to, there's something you can do about it right now.

Millions of Americans make sure they save a part of each paycheck by buying U.S. Savings Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan.

Nothing could be easier. Your payroll clerk sets aside any amount you wish from each paycheck, buys your Bonds, and delivers them to you.

Join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work—and start saving automatically now.

Why U.S. Savings Bonds are good to save

You now get 3¾% interest to maturity. This new rate, which went into effect June 1, 1959, makes your Bond money grow faster. Series E Bonds now mature 14 months earlier than before—in just 7 years, 9 months. Bonds bought before June 1, 1959, earn more, too—an extra ½% from that date to maturity.

You can get your money, with interest, any time you want it. Bonds are a ready reserve that you can cash anytime at any bank. But it pays to keep them.

Your money is guaranteed safe by the U.S. Government. Bonds are an absolutely riskless investment. The Government promises you that the cash value of your Bond will not drop—it can only grow.

Your money can't be lost or stolen. The Treasury will replace your Bonds, free, if anything happens to them.

You save more than money. You help save the peace with every Bond you buy. Peace costs money—for science, education, military strength. And the money you save helps keep our nation's economy strong.

ALTHOUGH the paid attendance of 8,656 was below the all-time high of 9,792 of 1948, Allegany and Fort Hill received a record sum of $3,997.90 each as their share from the Thanksgiving Day football game this year.

Twelve years ago, gate receipts were $10,742 but federal taxes took $1,826 that year and each school's share was $3,216. Last month, the gate receipts were $10,166.50. Prices of admission are higher than they were in 1948 and no federal tax is imposed now.

This is the fifth year that paid attendance at the holiday game exceeded the 8,000 mark. After the 1948 record of 9,792 came 8,971 in 1949. This was the third best year (8,656) and was followed by 8,498 in 1953 and 8,006 in 1950.

School officials are of the opinion that gate receipts and attendance would have been higher this year if the seating capacity in the concrete stands on the west side of the stadium had not been reduced. There were 400 less reserved tickets available because each seat was lengthened from 16 to 18 inches.

THERE'S an interesting story in the January issue of Turf and Sports Digest Magazine about J. Fred Colwill, of Lutherville, Md., who did such a fine job as racing secretary of the Cumberland Fair Association for nine consecutive years before Cumberland lost the races after the 1958 twelve-day meeting.

Author of the article is Snowden Carter, well known Baltimore turf writer, who reveals that Fred was one of five children, his mother and father were from England and his sister and three older brothers were born in Europe. Fred was born in Wilmington, Del., just a few months after the Colwills came to this country.

The senior Colwill was in the clothing business (at 86 today, he has long since retired) and was a buyer for Marshall Field when he first arrived in America. His job led him to Baltimore and he settled his family in Pikesville.

Fred lived near the 110th Field Artillery Armory in Pikesville. After school (Franklin High School in Reisterstown) he went regularly to the Armory where he picked up his friendships with the soldiers.

It was a horse artillery unit then and that was where Colwill first formed his association with the animals.

After completing high school, Fred went to work for his older brother Ed in the construction business. From this job he went to the Baltimore county court house as a clerk.

Then Colwill got himself a part-time job at Janon Fisher's farm exercising horses.

Twenty years ago Fred won the famed Maryland Hunt Cup with Blockade for the third straight time. Blockade, one of Man O' War's gamest sons, is no longer alive. He broke his neck in the Virginia Gold Cup race. Colwill suffered a concussion in the spill which put him in bed for a week. Blockade was owned by Fred's father-in-law, C. Ewing Tuttle.

Colwill had a brief career as a trainer but didn't have much luck so he got to thinking he'd rather be a race track official.

When George Mahoney became state racing chairman he put in the compulsory receiving barn for all horses running on a particular afternoon and Fred was hired to run this barn. That lasted two years when he became a patrol judge. Then he became paddock judge, clerk of the scales, placing judge and finally racing secretary.

Colwill feels that the man from whom he learned the most during those years of training was the late John B. Campbell. He went to New York and worked right beside Campbell, who was considered the nation's top racing secretary and handicapper.

Fred went on to become racing secretary at Pimlico, Bowie, Fair Hill, Timonium, Marlboro, Cumberland, Hagerstown and Bel Air. In 1956 he received his first appointment as a steward. Today, Colwill is steward at Pimlico, Bowie, Laurel and Charles Town and he still retains his secretary's post at the half milers.

Fred and his wife now own the Halcyon Farm. Two stallions, Double Brandy and War Age, stand there.

The Colwills have one son, Stiles Tuttle Colwill, eight, who is a rider of above average ability but his father says Stiles' best game is swimming.

Today, at 48, Colwill is regarded as one of the most able officials working at the nation's race tracks.

DIDJA NOTICE that Ed Schwarz, Allegany High School football coach, was among the hunters who bagged deer on the opening day of the season?

Wallace Walker, who is in charge of the Allegany Trade School, talked Schwarz into going hunting for the first time and Ed hit the target—a 119 pound buck—with his first shot. Walker also got a deer on the first day of the season.

Carroll Boggs, the "old pro," who usually does his shooting over the Cumberland Country Club golf course, got a buck on the first day of the season at Pea Vine Run, near his home, and when asked if he used a No. 5 iron, he replied:

"No, I used a wedge."

Deer Kill 114 For Second Day, Total Hits 536

One hundred and fourteen deer were reported slain yesterday by hunters in Allegany county, boosting the two-day toll to 538 with five days remaining before the close of the seven-day season. The official check on opening day was 424.

Last year 571 were killed during the first 7-day season but the record was established in 1957 when the total hit 623 for a six-day season.

Forty-seven kills were checked at the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police, 30 at Shipway's Inn, Green Ridge, 15 at Hess' Service Station, Oldtown, and 11 at the Westernport Police Station. Eleven other whitetails killed in Allegany were checked at Washington county stations.

The largest deer bagged yesterday was a 173-pounder with 10 points and was brought down by Kenneth Smith of Little Orleans on Town Hill.

Salvation Army, Park Place And Maccabees Win

The Salvation Army scored its first victory of the season in the Sunday School Basketball League by defeating Living Stone Church of the Brethern yesterday on the Y. M. C. A. court by the score of 46-33.

The win was the first in three outings while Living Stone suffered its second loss in three games in the league's National Division.

Mickey Keller dumped in 32 points to pace the Salvation Army while Timbrook headed Living Stone with 23 tallies.

In the American Division, Park Place Methodist rolled to its third straight win by defeating Centre Street Methodist by the score of 51-34. The loss was the third in a row for Centre Street.

Bennett led Park Place in scoring with 18 tallies while Tom Hubbs collected 20 for the losers.

The Maccabees registered their win of the season, downing Potomas Park E. U. B., to the tune of 31-27.

Jeff Milberg was high scorer for the Maccabees with 19 markers while Gary Zembower garnered 12 tallies for Potomac Park.

Boston Drafts Joe Bellino

DALLAS (AP)—The American Football League completed its player draft Monday night with Boston picking Navy's Joe Bellino.

And plans for pro ball which Bellino may have, however, probably will have to be delayed until he finishes his committment to the Navy.

There were 30 rounds in the draft, 24 of which were run off here Monday. The first six rounds of the draft were conducted by telephone here two weeks ago.

Monday Los Angeles chose Ben Balme, Yale guard, while Boston snared Heisman winner Bellino.

Also among the draftees was Ed Dyas, the Auburn fullback who holds the modern collegiate records for field goals. Los Angeles chose Dyas.

Giambra And Jones Clash At Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y. (UPI)—Local middleweight Joey Giambra is expected to step into the ring a slight favorite Tuesday night when he squares off against veteran Ralph (Tiger) Jones of New York.

Their scheduled 10-round clash in Memorial Auditorium marks the second meeting of the two battlers. In their first scrap, Giambra punched out a close decision.

Idle since last summer, Giambra earned a split-decision win over Rory Calhoun, White Plains, when he returned to action here late last month.

Johnstown Will Get Allentown Franchise

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI)—Joe Buzas, owner of the Allentown Red Sox, announced Monday he would definitely transfer the club's franchise to Johnstown, Pa. next season.

Buzas, who reportedly lost about $16,000 last season when his club finished near the bottom of the Eastern League, said the reason for his move was the "lack of cooperation" from the fans.

Both York and Johnstown were reportedly seeking the franchise and York was said to have dangled a rent free ball park as bait.

Buzas said the Johnstown offer was "just too good" to turn down, but did not reveal the details.

Former Head Of IBC Admits Dealing With Frank Carbo

Wife Of Hoodlum Got $45,000; Kearns Received $142,500

WASHINGTON (AP)—The former president of the International Boxing Clubs Monday acknowledged payments totaling more than $180,000 to an influential promoter and the wife of an alleged underworld fight kingpin. The aim, he said, was to insure a "free flow of fighters" for televised IBC bouts.

Truman Gibson, who nominally headed the now-defunct IBC in New York and Chicago, told a Senate subcommittee about payments of $142,500 which he said went to Jack Kearns, who once piloted heavyweight Jack Dempsey, among others.

He refused to accept a subcommittee lawyer's description of these transactions as payoffs.

Gibson confirmed that separate payments totaling between $40,000 and $45,000 went to Viola Masters. A subcommittee aide said records at Palm Beach, Fla., indicate she is married to Frankie Carbo.

Carbo Serving Time

Now serving time, Carbo was described as a hoodlum with widespread power in the fight business.

Earlier, Gibson—who is in trouble with the law himself—pictured Carbo as wielding sometimes-controlling influence over two dozen fight promoters and managers across the country.

Among other things, Gibson implied Carbo dictated terms for a 1952 rematch between Jersey Joe Walcott and heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano.

Gibson, leading off the anti-monopoly subcommittee's new round of hearings on gangster infiltration of the fight business, said the IBC decided to "live with" the underworld to avoid trouble in getting fighters.

The IBCS actually was controlled by James D. Norris jr. and Arthur M. Wirtz, but went out of operation a few years ago after the Supreme Court held it was monopolistic.

Kearn Was Paid

Gibson said he either made or ordered payments to Kearns. His testimony and a report by a government accountant indicated Kearns was paid by Telradio Promotions Inc., which handled television contracts for the boxing clubs, or by Nevill Advertising Agency.

The Masters woman also was listed as being paid by Telradio and Nevill, which were owned in effect by Norris and Wirtz. Both of these firms are defunct.

Although it wasn't pinned down, the money apparently went to Kearns and Mrs. Carbo in the 1954-57 period.

Gibson balked at an assertion by subcommittee lawyer John G. Bonomi that "you had to pay off Jack Kearns."

Organized Guild

"We wanted to maintain a flow of fighters," Gibson said, recalling the Boxing Managers Guild had started a strike in New York in 1950. Kearns, who is in his 70s, was an organizer of the Guild.

Gibson said "Our basic problem was a lack of communication with the managers" who he said had been complaining they weren't getting a big enough cut from fight telecasts.

Kearns performed many services for the IBC and more than earned the money he received, Gibson maintained.

It wasn't made clear just what duties Mrs. Carbo carried out, although she apparently was paid for the same purpose as Kearns.

Bonomi then wanted to know whether she was hired "to counter-balance Jack Kearns."

"That's what I said," Gibson responded.

TV Series Involved

"We were dealing with many managers whom we knew to be friendly with Frank Carbo," Gibson added. "We wanted continuity for our TV (boxing bout) series."

After hearing Gibson testify about connections between Carbo and many figut figures, Bonomi said it appeared "almost every leading manager or promoter in the United States is either closely associated with or controlled by Carbo in some degree."

Carbo is serving a two-year prison sentence for undercover fight operations.

Gibson is under indictment on the West Coast—along with Carbo Frank (Blinky) Palmero and others—on charges of trying to deal themselves in on purses received by Don Jordan, former welterweight champ. In the 1940s, Gibson was decorated by the government for civilian services to the War Department.

Stadium Inn Wins, 2-1

Stadium Inn won two out of three games from Cort's Cosmetics last night in the Allegany County Women's Shuffleboard League. Elaine Wilhelm was high scorer for the winning team with 26 points. Shirley McCullough headed Cort's with 19.

Schools Get $3,997 Parents From England

By C. V. BURNS

TWO COLLEGES and seven high schools in Western Maryland and nearby West Virginia have new basketball coaches for the 1960-61 season.

Ron Van Ryswyk is the new mentor at Frostburg State Teachers College which opens it home campaign tonight when Potomac State and Flavius Smith has taken over the reins at Shepherd College as successor to Billy Wireman, formerly of Kentucky.

Stackhouse is the new head man at Berkeley Springs.

William "Shad" Hunt, one-time LaSalle High star, makes his debut as head coach at St. Maria Goretti High School in Hagerstown and Ronnie Phillips, a product of Ridgeley High will guide the destinies of the Charles Town High School Panthers.

ALTHOUGH the paid attendance of 8,656 was below the all-time high of 9,792 of 1948, Allegany and Fort Hill received a record sum of $3,997.90 each as their share from the Thanksgiving Day football game this year.

Twelve years ago, gate receipts were $10,742 but federal taxes took $1,826 that year and each school's share was $3,216. Last month, the gate receipts were $10,166.50. Prices of admission are higher than they were in 1948 and no federal tax is imposed now.

This is the fifth year that paid attendance at the holiday game exceeded the 8,000 mark. After the 1948 record of 9,792 came 8,971 in 1949. This was the third best year (8,656) and was followed by 8,498 in 1953 and 8,006 in 1950.

School officials are of the opinion that gate receipts and attendance would have been higher this year if the seating capacity in the concrete stands on the west side of the stadium had not been reduced. There were 400 less reserved tickets available because each seat was lengthened from 16 to 18 inches.

THERE'S an interesting story in the January issue of Turf and Sports Digest Magazine about J. Fred Colwill, of Lutherville, Md., who did such a fine job as racing secretary of the Cumberland Fair Association for nine consecutive years before Cumberland lost the races after the 1958 twelve-day meeting.

Author of the article is Snowden Carter, well known Baltimore turf writer, who reveals that Fred was one of five children, his mother and father were from England and his sister and three older brothers were born in Europe. Fred was born in Wilmington, Del., just a few months after the Colwills came to this country.

The senior Colwill was in the clothing business (at 86 today, he has long since retired) and was a buyer for Marshall Field when he first arrived in America. His job led him to Baltimore and he settled his family in Pikesville.

Fred lived near the 110th Field Artillery Armory in Pikesville. After school (Franklin High School in Reisterstown) he went regularly to the Armory where he picked up his friendships with the soldiers.

It was a horse artillery unit then and that was where Colwill first formed his association with the animals.

After completing high school, Fred went to work for his older brother Ed in the construction business. From this job he went to the Baltimore county court house as a clerk.

Then Colwill got himself a part-time job at Janon Fisher's farm exercising horses.

Twenty years ago Fred won the famed Maryland Hunt Cup with Blockade for the third straight time. Blockade, one of Man O' War's gamest sons, is no longer alive. He broke his neck in the Virginia Gold Cup race. Colwill suffered a concussion in the spill which put him in bed for a week. Blockade was owned by Fred's father-in-law, C. Ewing Tuttle.

Colwill had a brief career as a trainer but didn't have much luck so he got to thinking he'd rather be a race track official.

When George Mahoney became state racing chairman he put in the compulsory receiving barn for all horses running on a particular afternoon and Fred was hired to run this barn. That lasted two years when he became a patrol judge. Then he became paddock judge, clerk of the scales, placing judge and finally racing secretary.

Colwill feels that the man from whom he learned the most during those years of training was the late John B. Campbell. He went to New York and worked right beside Campbell, who was considered the nation's top racing secretary and handicapper.

Fred went on to become racing secretary at Pimlico, Bowie, Fair Hill, Timonium, Marlboro, Cumberland, Hagerstown and Bel Air. In 1956 he received his first appointment as a steward. Today, Colwill is steward at Pimlico, Bowie, Laurel and Charles Town and he still retains his secretary's post at the half milers.

Fred and his wife now own the Halcyon Farm. Two stallions, Double Brandy and War Age, stand there.

The Colwills have one son, Stiles Tuttle Colwill, eight, who is a rider of above average ability but his father says Stiles' best game is swimming.

Today, at 48, Colwill is regarded as one of the most able officials working at the nation's race tracks.

DIDJA NOTICE that Ed Schwarz, Allegany High School football coach, was among the hunters who bagged deer on the opening day of the season?

Wallace Walker, who is in charge of the Allegany Trade School, talked Schwarz into going hunting for the first time and Ed hit the target—a 119 pound buck—with his first shot. Walker also got a deer on the first day of the season.

Carroll Boggs, the "old pro," who usually does his shooting over the Cumberland Country Club golf course, got a buck on the first day of the season at Pea Vine Run, near his home, and when asked if he used a No. 5 iron, he replied:

"No, I used a wedge."

Deer Kill 114 For Second Day, Total Hits 536

One hundred and fourteen deer were reported slain yesterday by hunters in Allegany county, boosting the two-day toll to 538 with five days remaining before the close of the seven-day season. The official check on opening day was 424.

Last year 571 were killed during the first 7-day season but the record was established in 1957 when the total hit 623 for a six-day season.

Forty-seven kills were checked at the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police, 30 at Shipway's Inn, Green Ridge, 15 at Hess' Service Station, Oldtown, and 11 at the Westernport Police Station. Eleven other whitetails killed in Allegany were checked at Washington county stations.

The largest deer bagged yesterday was a 173-pounder with 10 points and was brought down by Kenneth Smith of Little Orleans on Town Hill.

Salvation Army, Park Place And Maccabees Win

The Salvation Army scored its first victory of the season in the Sunday School Basketball League by defeating Living Stone Church of the Brethern yesterday on the Y. M. C. A. court by the score of 46-33.

The win was the first in three outings while Living Stone suffered its second loss in three games in the league's National Division.

Mickey Keller dumped in 32 points to pace the Salvation Army while Timbrook headed Living Stone with 23 tallies.

In the American Division, Park Place Methodist rolled to its third straight win by defeating Centre Street Methodist by the score of 51-34. The loss was the third in a row for Centre Street.

Bennett led Park Place in scoring with 18 tallies while Tom Hubbs collected 20 for the losers.

The Maccabees registered their win of the season, downing Potomas Park E. U. B., to the tune of 31-27.

Jeff Milberg was high scorer for the Maccabees with 19 markers while Gary Zembower garnered 12 tallies for Potomac Park.

Boston Drafts Joe Bellino

DALLAS (AP)—The American Football League completed its player draft Monday night with Boston picking Navy's Joe Bellino.

And plans for pro ball which Bellino may have, however, probably will have to be delayed until he finishes his committment to the Navy.

There were 30 rounds in the draft, 24 of which were run off here Monday. The first six rounds of the draft were conducted by telephone here two weeks ago.

Monday Los Angeles chose Ben Balme, Yale guard, while Boston snared Heisman winner Bellino.

Also among the draftees was Ed Dyas, the Auburn fullback who holds the modern collegiate records for field goals. Los Angeles chose Dyas.

Giambra And Jones Clash At Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y. (UPI)—Local middleweight Joey Giambra is expected to step into the ring a slight favorite Tuesday night when he squares off against veteran Ralph (Tiger) Jones of New York.

Their scheduled 10-round clash in Memorial Auditorium marks the second meeting of the two battlers. In their first scrap, Giambra punched out a close decision.

Idle since last summer, Giambra earned a split-decision win over Rory Calhoun, White Plains, when he returned to action here late last month.

Johnstown Will Get Allentown Franchise

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI)—Joe Buzas, owner of the Allentown Red Sox, announced Monday he would definitely transfer the club's franchise to Johnstown, Pa. next season.

Buzas, who reportedly lost about $16,000 last season when his club finished near the bottom of the Eastern League, said the reason for his move was the "lack of cooperation" from the fans.

Both York and Johnstown were reportedly seeking the franchise and York was said to have dangled a rent free ball park as bait.

Buzas said the Johnstown offer was "just too good" to turn down, but did not reveal the details.

Former Head Of IBC Admits Dealing With Frank Carbo

Wife Of Hoodlum Got $45,000; Kearns Received $142,500

WASHINGTON (AP)—The former president of the International Boxing Clubs Monday acknowledged payments totaling more than $180,000 to an influential promoter and the wife of an alleged underworld fight kingpin. The aim, he said, was to insure a "free flow of fighters" for televised IBC bouts.

Truman Gibson, who nominally headed the now-defunct IBC in New York and Chicago, told a Senate subcommittee about payments of $142,500 which he said went to Jack Kearns, who once piloted heavyweight Jack Dempsey, among others.

He refused to accept a subcommittee lawyer's description of these transactions as payoffs.

Gibson confirmed that separate payments totaling between $40,000 and $45,000 went to Viola Masters. A subcommittee aide said records at Palm Beach, Fla., indicate she is married to Frankie Carbo.

Carbo Serving Time

Now serving time, Carbo was described as a hoodlum with widespread power in the fight business.

Earlier, Gibson—who is in trouble with the law himself—pictured Carbo as wielding sometimes-controlling influence over two dozen fight promoters and managers across the country.

Among other things, Gibson implied Carbo dictated terms for a 1952 rematch between Jersey Joe Walcott and heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano.

Gibson, leading off the anti-monopoly subcommittee's new round of hearings on gangster infiltration of the fight business, said the IBC decided to "live with" the underworld to avoid trouble in getting fighters.

The IBCS actually was controlled by James D. Norris jr. and Arthur M. Wirtz, but went out of operation a few years ago after the Supreme Court held it was monopolistic.

Kearn Was Paid

Gibson said he either made or ordered payments to Kearns. His testimony and a report by a government accountant indicated Kearns was paid by Telradio Promotions Inc., which handled television contracts for the boxing clubs, or by Nevill Advertising Agency.

The Masters woman also was listed as being paid by Telradio and Nevill, which were owned in effect by Norris and Wirtz. Both of these firms are defunct.

Although it wasn't pinned down, the money apparently went to Kearns and Mrs. Carbo in the 1954-57 period.

Gibson balked at an assertion by subcommittee lawyer John G. Bonomi that "you had to pay off Jack Kearns."

Organized Guild

"We wanted to maintain a flow of fighters," Gibson said, recalling the Boxing Managers Guild had started a strike in New York in 1950. Kearns, who is in his 70s, was an organizer of the Guild.

Gibson said "Our basic problem was a lack of communication with the managers" who he said had been complaining they weren't getting a big enough cut from fight telecasts.

Kearns performed many services for the IBC and more than earned the money he received, Gibson maintained.

It wasn't made clear just what duties Mrs. Carbo carried out, although she apparently was paid for the same purpose as Kearns.

Bonomi then wanted to know whether she was hired "to counter-balance Jack Kearns."

"That's what I said," Gibson responded.

TV Series Involved

"We were dealing with many managers whom we knew to be friendly with Frank Carbo," Gibson added. "We wanted continuity for our TV (boxing bout) series."

After hearing Gibson testify about connections between Carbo and many figut figures, Bonomi said it appeared "almost every leading manager or promoter in the United States is either closely associated with or controlled by Carbo in some degree."

Carbo is serving a two-year prison sentence for undercover fight operations.

Gibson is under indictment on the West Coast—along with Carbo Frank (Blinky) Palmero and others—on charges of trying to deal themselves in on purses received by Don Jordan, former welterweight champ. In the 1940s, Gibson was decorated by the government for civilian services to the War Department.

Stadium Inn Wins, 2-1

Stadium Inn won two out of three games from Cort's Cosmetics last night in the Allegany County Women's Shuffleboard League. Elaine Wilhelm was high scorer for the winning team with 26 points. Shirley McCullough headed Cort's with 19.

National Loop Rejects 9-Team Interlocking Schedules

Club Owners Take Action At St. Louis

Frick May Decide Los Angeles Issue At Joint Session

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The National League has voted against an American League proposal calling for nine-team leagues in 1961 with interlocking schedules, National President Warren Giles said Monday night.

The action was taken at a meeting of NL club owners, which was recessed until Tuesday with no formal announcement other than Giles' off-the-cuff statement in a hotel lobby.

Giles also said each league is considering its own amendment to baseball's Rule 1, which stands in the way of American League expansion to Los Angeles. The rule now requires unanimous approval of all 16 major league clubs for one league to set up stop in a city of the other league.

Change Amendments

"What we are trying to do," Giles said, "is change the amendments here and there so that they are not so divergent and are more acceptable to Commissioner (Ford) Frick."

The way Giles explained it is this: The AL has drawn up an amendment which would permit expansion to Los Angeles in 1961. The NL version also would permit such expansion, but not until 1962.

The nine-team league was the American's counter-proposal after the National objected to immediate expansion to Los Angeles. The AL said it would delay going to Los Angeles until 1962 if the proposal was accepted.

Rejection Expected

Its rejection had been expected, although some AL clubowners insisted a nine-club program would be "the best for baseball."

Unless there is a sudden turnabout in the present trend, the entire matter will be dropped into the commissioner's lap at the joint meeting scheduled for Wednesday. If the leagues still are at odds, over an amendment, Fricks' vote would be decisive.

Frick always has spoken in favor of expansion, but has insisted on a "fair and equitable" amendment, "one that we can live win in the future." He has not commented on the two amendments drawn up in New York last week.

Bayard Loses Opener, 56-53

Tunnelton Defeats Grant County Quint

Tunnelton High School spoiled the 1960-61 debut of Bayard High School's basketball team by defeating the Grant Countians last night at Bayard by the score of 56-53.

Miller, Tunnelton center, scored 19 points while D. Martin was runner-up with 17 markers.

Lonnie Kuhn scored nine field goals and 7-9 fouls and accounted for 25 Bayard tallies. Wayne Hawk was the runner-up with 21 points on nine fielders and 5-5 at the free throw line.

Paul Eaton, Bayard guard, fouled out in the final period.

Club Owners Take Action At St. Louis

Frick May Decide Los Angeles Issue At Joint Session

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The National League has voted against an American League proposal calling for nine-team leagues in 1961 with interlocking schedules, National President Warren Giles said Monday night.

The action was taken at a meeting of NL club owners, which was recessed until Tuesday with no formal announcement other than Giles' off-the-cuff statement in a hotel lobby.

Giles also said each league is considering its own amendment to baseball's Rule 1, which stands in the way of American League expansion to Los Angeles. The rule now requires unanimous approval of all 16 major league clubs for one league to set up stop in a city of the other league.

Change Amendments

"What we are trying to do," Giles said, "is change the amendments here and there so that they are not so divergent and are more acceptable to Commissioner (Ford) Frick."

The way Giles explained it is this: The AL has drawn up an amendment which would permit expansion to Los Angeles in 1961. The NL version also would permit such expansion, but not until 1962.

The nine-team league was the American's counter-proposal after the National objected to immediate expansion to Los Angeles. The AL said it would delay going to Los Angeles until 1962 if the proposal was accepted.

Rejection Expected

Its rejection had been expected, although some AL clubowners insisted a nine-club program would be "the best for baseball."

Unless there is a sudden turnabout in the present trend, the entire matter will be dropped into the commissioner's lap at the joint meeting scheduled for Wednesday. If the leagues still are at odds, over an amendment, Fricks' vote would be decisive.

Frick always has spoken in favor of expansion, but has insisted on a "fair and equitable" amendment, "one that we can live win in the future." He has not commented on the two amendments drawn up in New York last week.

Tunnelton Defeats Grant County Quint

Tunnelton High School spoiled the 1960-61 debut of Bayard High School's basketball team by defeating the Grant Countians last night at Bayard by the score of 56-53.

Coach Francis Maleonskie's cagers led at the quarters, 12-11, 27-23 and 35-33 but weakened in the final period and lost out in the closing minutes.

Miller, Tunnelton center, scored 19 points while D. Martin was runner-up with 17 markers.

Lonnie Kuhn scored nine field goals and 7-9 fouls and accounted for 25 Bayard tallies. Wayne Hawk was the runner-up with 21 points on nine fielders and 5-5 at the free throw line.

Paul Eaton, Bayard guard, fouled out in the final period.

Mountaineers Play

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (UPI) — West Virginia probably will go with the same starting lineup when it meets The Citadel here Tuesday night.

WVU edged William and Mary 74-72 in the season opener Saturday night when guard Lee Patrone hit on two free throws in the last 30 seconds of an overtime period.

Following Tuesday's game, the Mountaineers go to Charlotte, N. C. for consecutive games Friday and Saturday with Wake Forest and Duke.

Stock Market, In Routine Session, Closes Lower

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks were mostly lower Monday in a routine session plagued by another round of gloomy business news.

Chemicals, steels and motors came under pressure while the food stocks were in demand again and some good gains were scored by utilities, drugs, building materials and scattered specials.

Steel shares had to contend with a dip in this weeks' operating rate while overall sentiment was influenced by reports of declining installment credit volume, gloomy forecasts by purchasing agents and a U.S. Chamber of Commerce prediction of a mild business slump during the 1961 first half.

The combination dropped the Dow-Jones industrial average 2.51 points lower to 593.49 while the rails lost 0.78 to 127.34. The "defensive' utilities rose 0.28 to 95.66. Volume climbed to 3,290,000 shares from 3,140,000 on Friday.

The market broadened to involve 1,262 issues and these included 605 losers, 427 gainers and 230 holding unchanged. New lows more than doubled new highs by 64 to 30.

The food stocks, still responding to talk of the new fat-fighting diet products, rang up some solid gains but the group faced a round of profit-taking before the day was over.

Stock Market, In Routine Session, Closes Lower

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks were mostly lower Monday in a routine session plagued by another round of gloomy business news.

Chemicals, steels and motors came under pressure while the food stocks were in demand again and some good gains were scored by utilities, drugs, building materials and scattered specials.

Steel shares had to contend with a dip in this weeks' operating rate while overall sentiment was influenced by reports of declining installment credit volume, gloomy forecasts by purchasing agents and a U.S. Chamber of Commerce prediction of a mild business slump during the 1961 first half.

The combination dropped the Dow-Jones industrial average 2.51 points lower to 593.49 while the rails lost 0.78 to 127.34. The "defensive' utilities rose 0.28 to 95.66. Volume climbed to 3,290,000 shares from 3,140,000 on Friday.

The market broadened to involve 1,262 issues and these included 605 losers, 427 gainers and 230 holding unchanged. New lows more than doubled new highs by 64 to 30.

The food stocks, still responding to talk of the new fat-fighting diet products, rang up some solid gains but the group faced a round of profit-taking before the day was over.

Card Of Thanks

WE WISH to take this means of extending our sincere thanks and appreciation to our friends in Baltimore, and neighbors and relatives who were so kind to us during our recent bereavement, the death of our brother, James R. Morgan. We especially wish to thank Rev. William Price, the organist, the pallbearers, those who sent floral tributes, those who donated the use of their cars, and all others who in any manner rendered assistance.
SISTER AND BROTHERS

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our mother and who died 2 years ago, December 6, 1958. "Pap" we miss you more each year, And often wish that you were here.
SADLY MISSED BY
WIFE, SONS, DAUGHTERS & GRANDCHILDREN

Inloving memory of our mother and sister, Ina May Alexander, who departed this earth December 5, 1954.
Memories and treasures none can steal, Death leaves a heartache, none can heal. Some have forgotten you, that now you are gone,
But we will remember you, no matter how long.
BROTHERS, SISTERS, CHILDREN & GRANDCHILDREN

Card Of Thanks

WE WISH to take this means of extending our sincere thanks and appreciation to our friends in Baltimore, and neighbors and relatives who were so kind to us during our recent bereavement, the death of our brother, James R. Morgan. We especially wish to thank Rev. William Price, the organist, the pallbearers, those who sent floral tributes, those who donated the use of their cars, and all others who in any manner rendered assistance.

Hands are always noticed.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Handy Hints For Flawless Grooming

Although hands are just about the easiest to cope with of all your grooming problems . . . they are often neglected — and wrongly so. Considering that hands are constantly on display, you'd be wise to give them a little attention.

Do your nails split when you pry open bobby pins, untie knots on your shoelaces, or punch typewriter keys? Maybe you need a little more calcium in your diet to make your nails stronger. Some women find that eating gelatin works miraculously. Still other nails just need a little extra pampering.

Every time you wash your hands be sure you rinse and dry thoroughly. Press back your cuticles as you dry. Always follow up with a tiny amount of hand lotion or cream.

Give yourself a manicure every week. Between manicures soak your nails in warm castor oil for ten minutes. Always buff the nails well when the polish has been removed. Buff in one direction—this avoids heating. Shape your nails with a long emery board, taking strokes from side to center never in a back and forth sawing motion. All this keeps nails healthy looking and prevents them from getting brittle or breaking easily.

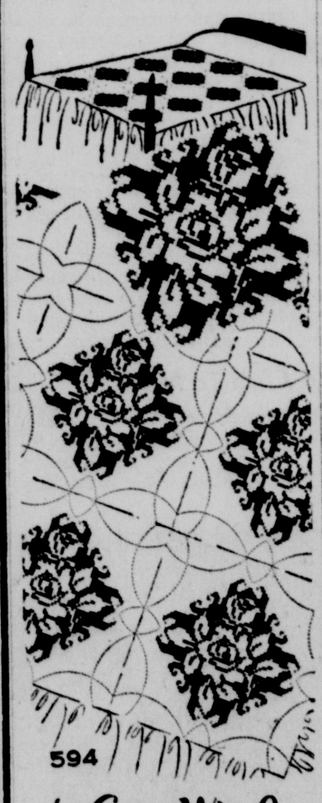

Save your nails — use letter openers for opening everything from rent bills to cereal box tops. When you have to clean out your closet or do a lot of gardening or any dirty job, wet your hands and rub with dry oatmeal followed by a good sudsing with soap. The heavy dirt will roll off fast. Of course, it's always wise to wear gloves when exposing your hands to such tasks. If you can't work with them on, dig your nails into a bar of pure soap first. Less dirt will get imbedded under them and what does will wash out more easily.

And remember to give your hands the same fine care you bestow on that less easily forgotten portion of your skin—your face. Reasonable to think of, isn't it . . . since both are covered by the same type of skin.

To find out the best care for YOUR type of skin, be it oily, dry, or spotted combination, bone up with "Secrets of Skin Care," my scientific aid to a clearer and younger complexion for both face and hands. A copy's yours for only a dime and a stamped return envelope sent to me, J. R. P., c/o this paper, requesting "Secrets of Skin Care."

Transatlantic Dirigible Flight Attempt 50 Years Ago Nearly Disastrous

By STEVE STILL

Written for The Associated Press

"Let go."

The command sliced through the wall of dripping gray fog to more than 200 shadowy figures on the ground below.

The men, all of Atlantic City's off-duty police and firemen, released their grips on handlines and the dirigible America lifted herself for man's first attempt to fly the Atlantic. The day was Oct. 15, 1910.

A great cheer arose from the onlookers at this milestone in aviation history. A hundred feet above them Walter Wellman, head of the expedition and the man who gave the order, turned to his radio operator.

"For a moment I felt warm," he said.

Wellman was a journalist of adventurous cloth who believed in creating sensational news instead of waiting for it to happen.

He previously had tried to be the the first man to reach the North Pole, first on foot and later in his lighter-than-air craft. The dirigible was damaged but was salvaged and when Peary won the race to the pole in 1909, Wellman conceived his transatlantic flight plan.

The radio operator, John Irwin, was too busy to answer the captain. He was comforting a frightened and howling kitten someone had tossed aboard just as the dirigible began its ascent. For the next three days and nights, as the brave attempt to chart a trail above the ocean turned into frustration and terror, Irwin was grateful for the young cat's company.

Wellman, with full awareness of the explosive nature of the 345,000 cubic feet of hydrogen that inflated the ship, had decided not to start the America's two powerful engines until they were over water.

Slung under the gas bag was the gondola that housed the crew, their instruments and supplies; below that was the torpedo-shaped gasoline tank; another step down came the lifeboat and trailing under it was the oddest appendage of all, the so-called equilibrator.

The equilibrator consisted of 30 steel drums filled with gasoline and threaded like spools on a 340-foot-long steel cable. Later aircraft were equipped with horizontal fins to help regulate their ascent without releasing gas but the America had no such refinements. Instead of stabilizing the dirigible's elevation, the equilibrator threatened to wreck it time and again during the voyage.

"Start the port motor," Wellman called to his chief engineer, Melvin Vaniman. The motor kicked over immediately.

Although the engines functioned well, the dirigible was only 200 feet above the Atlantic with part of the rattail, as the crew had renamed the equilibrator, trailing along on the water.

Weather forecasts in those days were little more than educated guesses and the information supplied to Wellman was one of the worst guesses ever.

Sunshine that had been counted on to expand the hydrogen and lift the ship couldn't penetrate the fog. The vapor itself had saturated the fabric envelope, adding to the ship's weight. It developed also that the craft had been overloaded.

During the first two hours, Irwin, whose radio set was mounted in the lifeboat, could hear the chatter of wireless and frequent "W" calls, the code letter assigned to the airship.

At 10:30 a.m., more than two hours after the takeoff, Wellman decided to answer the shore stations. Irwin and the captain hovered over the set, knowing full well what their fate would be if a spark reached the inflammable gas.

But the first air-to-ground radio message in history, reporting all well, was transmitted without incident.

The spectacular news was splashed on front pages throughout the world and captured the imagination of millions. It may even have influenced the future of a lad of 8 named Charles Lindbergh.

The airship was a crude forerunner of later leviathans that briefly battled for supremacy of the sky with heavier-than-air craft. The bag, 258 feet long and 52 feet in diameter, was made in France of cotton, silk and rubber.

The dirigible continued its laborious progress through the chilling fog. The engines vibrated so violently that there was danger they would shake loose from their moorings.

The calm that had prevailed since takeoff ended and gale-force winds buffeted the airship and shrilled through its rigging.

To compounds the craft's plight, the more powerful of the two engines had to be permanently stopped when its propellors began wobbling alarmingly.

With only the one engine toiling, the overloaded airship was at the mercy of the northeast gale.

Although still shrouded in fog, the America made good time with the help of the breeze Wellman, a robust and vigorous figure with a bristling black mustache, went from man to man, cheering him up.

But as darkness approached on Sunday, the second day, the perverse wind shifted and the America was forced southeastward. With the coolness of night, the gas contracted and the dirigible again was in danger of plunging into the sea.

The crew emptied more gasoline from the tanks and dropped additional supplies over the side. It was now apparent there was inadequate fuel remaining to complete the voyage.

With nothing else left to jettison, the crew set to work dismantling the larger engine and throwing the parts overboard. From now on the only question would be one of survival.

At daybreak on Monday, the America emerged into warm sunshine. But as the sun's rays warmed the hydrogen, the lightened America began to rise sharply and soon was at 3,000 feet.

Wellman called to Chief Engineer Melvin Vaniman: "Take her down."

There were two cords at Vaniman's hand. One pulled a valve that let the gas escape slowly. He reached for it but by mistake jerked the wrong line. It opened a valve that let the hydrogen pour from the balloon. Before Vaniman could close it, the America was descending as fast as she had been climbing moments before.

The dirigible, using its equilibrator like a bumper, skipped several times on the surface of the sea and bounced 300 feet into the air. For once the rattail had been of value.

The America drifted throughout the day and into the third night.

Irwin remained on watch until 3 a.m. He was still awake an hour later when one of the lookouts shouted, "There's a light."

Irwin soon was in radio contact with the vessel, with Wellman dictating messages and copying the replies.

"Come ahead full speed but keep astern. We have a heavy tail dragging," he told the ship.

Wellman, still hopeful the men would not have to take to the sea, next suggested, "Come in close and put your bow under us. We will drop you a line but do not stop your ship as you will capsize us."

Seconds later the order was hurriedly countermanded when the airmen caught sight of huge cinders pouring from the ship's smokestack. This was no time to risk an explosion.

Wellman decided to launch the lifeboat and asked the captain of the vessel, identified as the Trent, to stand by.

The Trent came near and a sailor tossed a line to Wellman.

The aeronauts were given a tumultous welcome by the ship's crew and some 200 passengers homeward bound from the West Indies. Many were in tears at the happy ending to the four-hour-long rescue ordeal.

"There she goes," someone shouted and the airmen lined the rail to watch the America, now at a great height, drift proudly out of sight, her place in aviation history assured.

Wellman considered the trip a failure, despite the many firsts recorded for the America and the new distance and endurance records she had set. Although only 375 miles off Cape Hatteras when abandoned, the America had covered at least 1,000 miles in her wandering way.

When the Trent docked in New York, the airmen were given a warm welcome that wiped out any taste of defeat.

After the America's flight, Wellman wrote several books, but lived quietly and never again set foot in either an airplane or a dirigible.

Before his death at the age of 75 in 1934, he saw the air feats he visualized carried to completion by others.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	2 ♦
2 ♥	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♦

It is all very well to be guided by standard valuation methods in bidding a hand when one contemplates the cooperation of a partner but, when partner has proven to be a washout, one should continue the fight only with cash register tricks. Take note of the rather expensive lesson that South was taught in today's hand.

Despite North's failure to keep the bidding open, South insisted on showing his other four card suit. West did not fall into the common error of bidding two no trump. He considered it more prudent to put the opposition to work for him. This he accomplished by the simple medium of the penalty double. The result was a three trick set for a net profit of 800 points.

North added fuel to the fire by inquiring brimidically, "Did my bidding deceive you partner?" South attempted to justify his action on the basis of his 18 high card points.

There was no excuse for South's second bid. North, by failing to keep the opening bid alive, had confessed that his hand was trickless. At such times opener must not rely on high card points. He will be fighting single handed and must depend only on sure tricks.

Not with any reasonable stretch of optimism could South count on winning more than five or six tricks himself. This amounts to signing up for at least a 500 point contribution if doubled, a contingency which should not have appeared at all remote.

To South it is recommended that in the future he be a little more circumspect than to take on two opponents single handed. The risk of being caught between two fairly strong hands should have been apparent. South was in effect attempting to fight tanks with a peashooter.

JETS GULP FUEL

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Boeing 707 jet airliner consumes more fuel in the 145 minute flight from Miami to New York than the average motorist does in seven years of driving, according to Northeast Airlines.

The 707's swallow up around 5,000 gallons of aviation fuel on the run while a motorist, averaging 15 miles to a gallon, can drive 75,000 miles on that amount.

Hands are always noticed.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Handy Hints For Flawless Grooming

Although hands are just about the easiest to cope with of all your grooming problems . . . they are often neglected — and wrongly so. Considering that hands are constantly on display, you'd be wise to give them a little attention.

Do your nails split when you pry open bobby pins, untie knots on your shoelaces, or punch typewriter keys? Maybe you need a little more calcium in your diet to make your nails stronger. Some women find that eating gelatin works miraculously. Still other nails just need a little extra pampering.

Every time you wash your hands be sure you rinse and dry thoroughly. Press back your cuticles as you dry. Always follow up with a tiny amount of hand lotion or cream.

Give yourself a manicure every week. Between manicures soak your nails in warm castor oil for ten minutes. Always buff the nails well when the polish has been removed. Buff in one direction—this avoids heating. Shape your nails with a long emery board, taking strokes from side to center never in a back and forth sawing motion. All this keeps nails healthy looking and prevents them from getting brittle or breaking easily.

Save your nails — use letter openers for opening everything from rent bills to cereal box tops. When you have to clean out your closet or do a lot of gardening or any dirty job, wet your hands and rub with dry oatmeal followed by a good sudsing with soap. The heavy dirt will roll off fast. Of course, it's always wise to wear gloves when exposing your hands to such tasks. If you can't work with them on, dig your nails into a bar of pure soap first. Less dirt will get imbedded under them and what does will wash out more easily.

And remember to give your hands the same fine care you bestow on that less easily forgotten portion of your skin—your face. Reasonable to think of, isn't it . . . since both are covered by the same type of skin.

To find out the best care for YOUR type of skin, be it oily, dry, or spotted combination, bone up with "Secrets of Skin Care," my scientific aid to a clearer and younger complexion for both face and hands. A copy's yours for only a dime and a stamped return envelope sent to me, J. R. P., c/o this paper, requesting "Secrets of Skin Care."

Transatlantic Dirigible Flight Attempt 50 Years Ago Nearly Disastrous

By STEVE STILL

Written for The Associated Press

"Let go."

The command sliced through the wall of dripping gray fog to more than 200 shadowy figures on the ground below.

The men, all of Atlantic City's off-duty police and firemen, released their grips on handlines and the dirigible America lifted herself for man's first attempt to fly the Atlantic. The day was Oct. 15, 1910.

A great cheer arose from the onlookers at this milestone in aviation history. A hundred feet above them Walter Wellman, head of the expedition and the man who gave the order, turned to his radio operator.

"For a moment I felt warm," he said.

Wellman was a journalist of adventurous cloth who believed in creating sensational news instead of waiting for it to happen.

He previously had tried to be the the first man to reach the North Pole, first on foot and later in his lighter-than-air craft. The dirigible was damaged but was salvaged and when Peary won the race to the pole in 1909, Wellman conceived his transatlantic flight plan.

The radio operator, John Irwin, was too busy to answer the captain. He was comforting a frightened and howling kitten someone had tossed aboard just as the dirigible began its ascent. For the next three days and nights, as the brave attempt to chart a trail above the ocean turned into frustration and terror, Irwin was grateful for the young cat's company.

Wellman, with full awareness of the explosive nature of the 345,000 cubic feet of hydrogen that inflated the ship, had decided not to start the America's two powerful engines until they were over water.

Slung under the gas bag was the gondola that housed the crew, their instruments and supplies; below that was the torpedo-shaped gasoline tank; another step down came the lifeboat and trailing under it was the oddest appendage of all, the so-called equilibrator.

The equilibrator consisted of 30 steel drums filled with gasoline and threaded like spools on a 340-foot-long steel cable. Later aircraft were equipped with horizontal fins to help regulate their ascent without releasing gas but the America had no such refinements. Instead of stabilizing the dirigible's elevation, the equilibrator threatened to wreck it time and again during the voyage.

"Start the port motor," Wellman called to his chief engineer, Melvin Vaniman. The motor kicked over immediately.

Although the engines functioned well, the dirigible was only 200 feet above the Atlantic with part of the rattail, as the crew had renamed the equilibrator, trailing along on the water.

Weather forecasts in those days were little more than educated guesses and the information supplied to Wellman was one of the worst guesses ever.

Sunshine that had been counted on to expand the hydrogen and lift the ship couldn't penetrate the fog. The vapor itself had saturated the fabric envelope, adding to the ship's weight. It developed also that the craft had been overloaded.

During the first two hours, Irwin, whose radio set was mounted in the lifeboat, could hear the chatter of wireless and frequent "W" calls, the code letter assigned to the airship.

At 10:30 a.m., more than two hours after the takeoff, Wellman decided to answer the shore stations. Irwin and the captain hovered over the set, knowing full well what their fate would be if a spark reached the inflammable gas.

But the first air-to-ground radio message in history, reporting all well, was transmitted without incident.

The spectacular news was splashed on front pages throughout the world and captured the imagination of millions. It may even have influenced the future of a lad of 8 named Charles Lindbergh.

The airship was a crude forerunner of later leviathans that briefly battled for supremacy of the sky with heavier-than-air craft. The bag, 258 feet long and 52 feet in diameter, was made in France of cotton, silk and rubber.

The dirigible continued its laborious progress through the chilling fog. The engines vibrated so violently that there was danger they would shake loose from their moorings.

The calm that had prevailed since takeoff ended and gale-force winds buffeted the airship and shrilled through its rigging.

To compounds the craft's plight, the more powerful of the two engines had to be permanently stopped when its propellors began wobbling alarmingly.

With only the one engine toiling, the overloaded airship was at the mercy of the northeast gale.

Before dawn the wind shifted in the America's favor and the overworked engine was shut off to cool.

Although still shrouded in fog, the America made good time with the help of the breeze. Wellman, a robust and vigorous figure with a bristling black mustache, went from man to man, cheering him up.

But as darkness approached on Sunday, the second day, the perverse wind shifted and the America was forced southeastward. With the coolness of night, the gas contracted and the dirigible again was in danger of plunging into the sea.

The crew emptied more gasoline from the tanks and dropped additional supplies over the side. It was now apparent there was inadequate fuel remaining to complete the voyage.

With nothing else left to jettison, the crew set to work dismantling the larger engine and throwing the parts overboard. From now on the only question would be one of survival.

At daybreak on Monday, the America emerged into warm sunshine. But as the sun's rays warmed the hydrogen, the lightened America began to rise sharply and soon was at 3,000 feet.

Wellman called to Chief Engineer Melvin Vaniman: "Take her down."

There were two cords at Vaniman's hand. One pulled a valve that let the gas escape slowly. He reached for it but by mistake jerked the wrong line. It opened a valve that let the hydrogen pour from the balloon. Before Vaniman could close it, the America was descending as fast as she had been climbing moments before.

The dirigible, using its equilibrator like a bumper, skipped several times on the surface of the sea and bounced 300 feet into the air. For once the rattail had been of value.

The America drifted throughout the day and into the third night.

Irwin remained on watch until 3 a.m. He was still awake an hour later when one of the lookouts shouted, "There's a light."

Irwin soon was in radio contact with the vessel, with Wellman dictating messages and copying the replies.

"Come ahead full speed but keep astern. We have a heavy tail dragging," he told the ship.

Wellman, still hopeful the men would not have to take to the sea, next suggested, "Come in close and put your bow under us. We will drop you a line but do not stop your ship as you will capsize us."

Seconds later the order was hurriedly countermanded when the airmen caught sight of huge cinders pouring from the ship's smokestack. This was no time to risk an explosion.

Wellman decided to launch the lifeboat and asked the captain of the vessel, identified as the Trent, to stand by.

The Trent came near and a sailor tossed a line to Wellman.

The aeronauts were given a tumultous welcome by the ship's crew and some 200 passengers homeward bound from the West Indies. Many were in tears at the happy ending to the four-hour-long rescue ordeal.

"There she goes," someone shouted and the airmen lined the rail to watch the America, now at a great height, drift proudly out of sight, her place in aviation history assured.

Wellman considered the trip a failure, despite the many firsts recorded for the America and the new distance and endurance records she had set. Although only 375 miles off Cape Hatteras when abandoned, the America had covered at least 1,000 miles in her wandering way.

When the Trent docked in New York, the airmen were given a warm welcome that wiped out any taste of defeat.

After the America's flight, Wellman wrote several books, but lived quietly and never again set foot in either an airplane or a dirigible.

Before his death at the age of 75 in 1934, he saw the air feats he visualized carried to completion by others.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	2 ♦
2 ♥	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♦

It is all very well to be guided by standard valuation methods in bidding a hand when one contemplates the cooperation of a partner but, when partner has proven to be a washout, one should continue the fight only with cash register tricks. Take note of the rather expensive lesson that South was taught in today's hand.

Despite North's failure to keep the bidding open, South insisted on showing his other four card suit. West did not fall into the common error of bidding two no trump. He considered it more prudent to put the opposition to work for him. This he accomplished by the simple medium of the penalty double. The result was a three trick set for a net profit of 800 points.

North added fuel to the fire by inquiring brimidically, "Did my bidding deceive you partner?" South attempted to justify his action on the basis of his 18 high card points.

There was no excuse for South's second bid. North, by failing to keep the opening bid alive, had confessed that his hand was trickless. At such times opener must not rely on high card points. He will be fighting single handed and must depend only on sure tricks.

Not with any reasonable stretch of optimism could South count on winning more than five or six tricks himself. This amounts to signing up for at least a 500 point contribution if doubled, a contingency which should not have appeared at all remote.

To South it is recommended that in the future he be a little more circumspect than to take on two opponents single handed. The risk of being caught between two fairly strong hands should have been apparent. South was in effect attempting to fight tanks with a peashooter.

JETS GULP FUEL

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Boeing 707 jet airliner consumes more fuel in the 145 minute flight from Miami to New York than the average motorist does in seven years of driving, according to Northeast Airlines.

The 707's swallow up around 5,000 gallons of aviation fuel on the run while a motorist, averaging 15 miles to a gallon, can drive 75,000 miles on that amount.

Eclipses of the sun are used by map makers to measure distances on the earth's surface with extreme accuracy.

Edwin Warfield Explains Plan For Colleges

Commission Chief Addresses PTA

On the practical approach that classrooms, laboratories and study lecture halls can be built and equipped much cheaper than dormitories and dining halls, the Warfield Commission report bases its argument on more education for more people at a lower cost.

Edwin Warfield III, chairman of the Governor's Commission on the Problem of Expansion of the University of Maryland, spoke at a meeting of the Allegany Council Parent Teachers Associations last night in West Side School, and outlined the concepts of the study.

Four fundamental concepts guided the commission's deliberations, he declared. These were:

1. That educational facilities should be made available to every Maryland citizen on as equitable a basis as prudent use of resources would permit.

2. That the quality of education in Maryland must be maintained continually at a high level.

3. That college environments should be such as to encourage the full development of able students and to attract highly qualified faculties.

4. That economy of expansion and operation must be maintained in obligation to the students and to the taxpayers of Maryland.

Lists Differences

"In noting that several counties," Warfield said, "have less than 20 per cent of their high school graduates going to college, and that one county has 50 per cent attending, we felt that although most of the college students in Maryland are coming from urban and metropolitan areas, the remainder of the state should not be neglected."

In its study, the commission learned that 17½ per cent of high school graduates of 1957 in Allegany and Garrett counties went to college. The commission felt, he said, that every effort should be made to encourage a higher percentage of students from this area to gain benefits of a university education.

In balancing the principles that the commission established, Mr. Warfield said they viewed the establishment of a network of four-year colleges, each having an enrollment of 1,000 or more, each serving large numbers of students on a commuting basis, and each offering an opportunity to:

1 Prepare for teaching in the elementary and secondary schools including senior high schools.

2. Take a general course leading to a bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degree.

3. Take all the essential courses of the first two years of college so as to transfer to highly specialized courses at College Park in their junior and senior years in such areas as agriculture, home economics and engineering.

Future Projects

In viewing the various regions of Maryland, Warfield continued, it became apparent that:

1. If a new center were developed in Garrett or Allegany counties, both the existing State Teachers College at Frostburg and the new center would be too small for economical operation.

2. That the State Teachers College at Salisbury developed into a university center and Maryland State College at Princess Anne could adequately provide for the expanding enrollment needs of that area.

3. That the State Teachers College at Towson and the University of Maryland at College Park offered two complementary locations for serving the large urban and metropolitan population, and as a university center, Towson could be expected to increase enrollment from 1,500 enrolled last year to 5,000 in ten years and College Park would continue to grow rapidly.

The commission recommended, Mr. Warfield noted, that the first phase of an expansion program should be the combination of the excellent educational resources which the state has developed at Frostburg, Salisbury, Towson and College Park.

If placed in effect, he said, and if found to be operating satisfactorily, then the commission proposes new centers to serve Washington and Frederick counties, Southern Maryland, and Central Eastern Shore.

The commission decided that the University has projected 13,997 more students in the 10 years ahead at a facility cost of $42,-

Driver Posts $1,000 Bond In Hit-Run

Stephen L. DuVall Faces Hearing

Stephen Lee DuVall, 21, of 521 Woodside Avenue, yesterday was charged with failing to stop after striking a local woman Thursday evening on Cumberland Street, and was released on $1,000 bond to await a hearing in Trial Magistrate Court.

DuVall was taken before Magistrate Paul W. Barnett yesterday afternoon who set bond at $1,000 for DuVall's appearance in court to face action on the motor vehicle charge.

Magistrate Barnett ordered DuVall committed to the County Jail in default of bond, but authorities released the young man later after bond was posted with Magistrate Russell Nierman at Flintstone.

DuVall was charged yesterday with failing to stop after striking Miss Marguerite Fahey, 56, of 447 Cumberland Street. Miss Fahey was seriously hurt in the hit-and-run accident and is reported "improving" at Sacred Heart Hospital.

Police arrested DuVall Saturday and said he admitted striking Miss Fahey and leaving the scene of the accident.

Attorney Harold E. Naughton represents DuVall and has requested a hearing at a later date.

State's Attorney James S. Getty said yesterday the charge, upon conviction, carries a penalty of imprisonment from 30 days to a year, a fine from $50 to $1,000, or both.

Officer Stewart To Be Awarded Commendation

A letter of commendation will be presented to Police Officer James L. Stewart during a ceremony today at 8:30 a.m. at Police Headquarters.

The citation will be presented by Police and Fire Commissioner Philmore Fleming and Police Chief B. Frank Gaffney.

It notes that Officer Stewart, during a tour of duty November 30, prevented what might have been a disastrous fire with probable loss of life.

While patroling the Maryland Avenue beat early that morning, the officer noticed sparks coming from the chimney of a home at 325 Maryland Avenue. He alerted residents and then turned in an alarm which resulted in the flue fire being extinguished with minor damage.

The letter of commendation will be listed in Officer Stewart's personnel file.

Local Man Fined

Ernest S. Martin, 23, of 39 Browning Street, was fined $100 yesterday in Trial Magistrate Court on a charge of killing a doe deer Saturday in the Rocky Gap section.

Martin was found guilty of the game violation by Magistrate Paul W. Barnett. The South End man was arrested by Joseph K. Keating, district game warden.

Magistrate Barnett ordered Martin committed to the County Jail for 15 days in default of the fine, but Martin was released last night after paying his fine and $2.50 court costs.

Meeting Set Today

B&O Asked To Repair Crossings

Knox, Valley Street Hazards Are Cited

Mayor J. Edwin Keech yesterday asked the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to inspect all of its grade crossings here so necessary repairs may be scheduled.

In a letter to R. J. Cannon, Cumberland division superintendent, Mayor Keech said it has been called to his attention that many of the B & O crossings are in very bad state of repair.

He said the Knox and Valley Street crossings are particularly bad and that a serious accident may result if they are not repaired immediately.

If an automobile happens to be on the crossing at the time the gates are to be closed, he said, the operator must increase his speed and if he should happen to hit one of the holes, it is possible the vehicle might go out of control.

Mayor Keech said he would be grateful if the railroad checks with the Police Department prior to the closing of any crossing.

The B & O recently repaired the Frederick and Bedford Street crossings.

Earlier this fall, the B & O asked permission to close down the Baltimore Street crossing for two weeks to install new tracks and crossing.

The request was turned down by Police Commissioner Philmore Fleming, who said the free flow of traffic is essential to the well being of the city.

Meyersdale Native Dies In Plane Crash

Killed was Clay J. Donges, 42-year-old native of Meyersdale and president of the Donges Aircraft Service at South Euclid, Ohio.

Ohio authorities said the plane was being piloted by John J. Duffy Jr., 35, who also perished in the crash. Duffy was president of an advertising agency which purchased the aircraft about two weeks ago.

Donges, a veteran of more than 10,000 hours of flying, reportedly was helping Duffy familiarize himself with the five-passenger Beechcraft that went into a dive over the residential area about seven miles east of Cleveland, where the plane had taken off.

An investigation into the cause of the crash has been ordered by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Blazing gasoline sprayed two houses, two cars parked in a driveway and a garage, causing damage that was estimated at $10,000.

A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clay Donges, the victim of the crash graduated from Meyersdale High School and Ashland (Ohio) College. Donges was a pilot during World War II and his interest in planes and flying resulted in his founding his flying service.

His company provided flying instruction and chartering service also, friends of the family report.

Survivors include his widow, the former Miss Mildred Pfeiffer of Meyersdale; two young children; a brother, George Donges, a member of the faculty of Ashland College, and two sisters.

Deductible Plan Is Announced By Blue Cross

Would Mean Lower Rate For Members

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland Blue Cross Plan Monday announced $50 deductible insurance coverage for subscribers wishing to pay part of their hospital expenses in exchange for a lower policy rate.

The alternate to standard full-coverage protection provides that a subscriber admitted to a member hospital would pay a deductible of up to $25 for a one-day stay or up to $50 for two days or more.

The maximum deductible chargeable to any individual or family sudscriber to Blue Cross insurance would be $50 for any 12-month period.

The deductible policy, which does not extend to Blue Shield coverage for physicians' services, had been recommended by groups reviewing new rate increases approved for the plan this year.

The new program was one solution officials proposed as a means of curbing alleged over-use of hospital facilities for short visits.

The announcement noted that with the exception of the deductible feature, benefits offered under the insurance program would be identical with the standard Blue Cross coverage.

The rates for the new plan average 15 per cent less than standard coverage, ranging from $3.30 to $7.50 monthly depending on the type of membership. This is 50 cents to $1.50 less than comparable coverage under the standard policy.

Notices of the plan were sent to all groups carrying standard coverage, and non-group subscribers will receive the announcement with their next regular billing.

Attending the meeting held in City Hall were Mayor J. Edwin Keech, City Engineer C. R. Nuzum, Dr. Ton van Strien, J. Byron Dowling, Police Chief B. F. Gaffney, Fire Chief Virgil Parker and Charles Scarlett, assistant city engineer.

Board Requests Classification Moratorium

Proposal Tabled Pending Conference

The Mayor and Council yesterday morning tabled a Civil Service Commission request that department heads forego contemplated requests for changes until the job classification and compensation plan has been in effect for a year.

Action on the recommendation was delayed until the Mayor and Council can meet with the commission to discuss the proposal.

The commission said Ordinances 2146 and 2147 which established a Job Classification and Compensation Plan for all city employes became effective July 1.

Acts On Requests

The commission said that since the passage of the ordinances, it has received and reviewed several requests for reclassification and increases in pay.

It said that where is was apparent that inequities existed, it made reclassification recommendations which were adopted by the Mayor and Council, adding:

"In other cases, however, the requests were denied, since it was the concensus of the members that there should be no change...."

The board recommended, since the ordinances have been in effect for only five months, that the Mayor and Council suggest that all department heads forego any requests for reclassification until the program has been in effect for at least a year — which it termed the minimum time necessary for the plan to achieve stability.

Say Time Needed

The board said that if it is still felt that serious inequities exist, the usual procedure should be followed.

"We feel," the commission said, "that in this way the program will have a minimum time to operate as originally established, except with a few minor changes without having the spirit and intent of the program defeated."

The commission said the plan has been long needed and that the board has recommended it for at least five years, and "we feel that it should have a fair opportunity to indicate its value in the proper administration of personnel affairs of the city."

Pennsylvania Hunters Shot

Two Pennsylvania residents were shot yesterday while hunting deer.

Christopher Weimer, 47, of Acosta, is reported in "critical" condition at Meyersdale Community Hospital. Authorities said he was shot in the face while hunting deer on Shelter Rock Road near Negro Mountain.

The shooting was reported to have occurred about six miles northwest of Springs. Full details were not available last night.

Victor Backstrom, 56, of West Union was shot in the leg when he was in "the line of fire" of Thomas E. Allison, 43, of Star Junction, police said.

They reported that a lot of shooting was going on in the area and Backstrom got behind a tree and was hit after Allison blasted away at a deer in the vicinity.

Backstrom is reported in "satisfactory" condition at the hospital.

Eyewitnesses said strong winds buffeted the plane just before it fell into the water. Davis' body was recovered a short time later.

County Board Asks 15 Changes In Local Laws

Legislators Urge Complete Study

The Board of Allegany County Commissioners presented a slate of 15 changes or amendments desired in the county code last night at a meeting in the Court House with Allegany County legislators.

Following a session of nearly 2½ hours the legislators suggested that the commissioners present all the necessary data so that local legislation can be cleared up by March 1.

Delegate Fred B. Driscoll also suggested that a long range plan be considered by the commissioners to study the county code and make all necessary revisions to bring it up to date.

Mr. Driscoll stated that the present efforts to change and amend the various sections of the code might just be piecemeal.

The commissioners, through their attorney, Leslie J. Clark, promised to have all their requests in readiness in time for the legislators to act upon them.

It also was pointed out that the county should send Mr. Clark to Annapolis to meet with the county delegation in order to iron out all of the legislation during the 90-day session of the General Assembly which starts in January.

Changes Summarized

Broken down briefly the changes submitted by the county commissioners included:

1. Changing the name of the Alms House to the Allegany County House as is generally accepted now. The legislators agreed to this change.

2. Deletion of the provision that the county commissioners meet once each month at the Alms House to audit books and make other necessary changes. The county commissioners said this provision is now obsolete.

The commissioners pointed out that all auditing is done through regular channels and that visits to the Alms House are unnecessary. The commissioners also said they would forego the $50 extra paid each one every quarter for the meetings. The legislators agreed to make the change.

3. Deletion of the provision in the code that the annual levy be broken down into percentages to show where money is spent. The county fathers explained that this does not show a true picture as there is approximately $750,000 additional revenue received from other sources by the county which are not reflected in this breakdown. The legislators agreed the provision was obsolete.

4. An amendment was urged to change the code dealing with gifts to various organizations such as Community Chest (now known as County United Fund), etc. The law now specifies a maximum total of $7,000 with certain amounts specified to certain groups. The commissioners and legislators agreed to set a maximum total of $8,000 with some dissension on whether to earmark the funds or leave the gifts up to the discretion of the county.

5. Change in the law requiring bids on $1,000 or more for supplies and equipments. The county asked that the amount be increased to $5,000 and the legislators concurred.

6. Revision of the law dealing with accounts against the county which require notarized statements. The groups agreed to drop the requirement of notarization.

7. Changes in the law pertaining to the duties of the county treasurer, possible inclusion of the office of county auditor and a change in the present $100,000 bond required for the treasurer.

The legislators agreed to cut the bond to $25,000 at a saving of $2,000 for the county and asked that the commissioners outline what other changes are necessary to the law.

8. Request to put clerical help in the county tax collector's office under a blanket bond. The legislators agreed all clerical help handling money should be bonded and felt it possible to put the tax collector's help under a blanket bond.

9. A request to change the levy date from the third Tuesday in April to the third Tuesday in March. This, however, was met with some opposition from Commissioner J. T. Mason and was tabled without further discussion.

10. Changes in industrial exemptions with a study now being made and the county to make recommendations later.

11. Changes in roads department laws which are obsolete. Recommendations to be made later.

Liquor Law Affected

12. Liquor board law revisions. County Treasurer now takes care of board's books and the commissioners feel the duties could be taken over by the secretary to the board.

13. Western Association of County Commissioners advocates fees for handling license plates at county tax collector's office should be raised. Presently saves Department of Motor Vehicles 39 cents and the county spends $5,000 to collect $3,000.

14. Authorization for county planning and zoning commission to take over service to communities of 10,000 population or less if resolution asking for service comes from community. Legislators agreed this is a good plan.

15. Study of Sanitary Act of 1957 with possible request later from county for amendments of law.

Delegate Fred B. Driscoll also suggested that a long range plan be considered by the commissioners to study the county code and make all necessary revisions to bring it up to date.

Mr. Driscoll stated that the present efforts to change and amend the various sections of the code might just be piecemeal.

The commissioners, through their attorney, Leslie J. Clark, promised to have all their requests in readiness in time for the legislators to act upon them.

It also was pointed out that the county should send Mr. Clark to Annapolis to meet with the county delegation in order to iron out all of the legislation during the 90-day session of the General Assembly which starts in January.

Changes Summarized

Broken down briefly the changes submitted by the county commissioners included:

1. Changing the name of the Alms House to the Allegany County House as is generally accepted now. The legislators agreed to this change.

2. Deletion of the provision that the county commissioners meet once each month at the Alms House to audit books and make other necessary changes. The county commissioners said this provision is now obsolete.

The commissioners pointed out that all auditing is done through regular channels and that visits to the Alms House are unnecessary. The commissioners also said they would forego the $50 extra paid each one every quarter for the meetings. The legislators agreed to make the change.

3. Deletion of the provision in the code that the annual levy be broken down into percentages to show where money is spent. The county fathers explained that this does not show a true picture as there is approximately $750,000 additional revenue received from other sources by the county which are not reflected in this breakdown. The legislators agreed the provision was obsolete.

4. An amendment was urged to change the code dealing with gifts to various organizations such as Community Chest (now known as County United Fund), etc. The law now specifies a maximum total of $7,000 with certain amounts specified to certain groups. The commissioners and legislators agreed to set a maximum total of $8,000 with some dissension on whether to earmark the funds or leave the gifts up to the discretion of the county.

5. Change in the law requiring bids on $1,000 or more for supplies and equipments. The county asked that the amount be increased to $5,000 and the legislators concurred.

6. Revision of the law dealing with accounts against the county which require notarized statements. The groups agreed to drop the requirement of notarization.

7. Changes in the law pertaining to the duties of the county treasurer, possible inclusion of the office of county auditor and a change in the present $100,000 bond required for the treasurer.

The legislators agreed to cut the bond to $25,000 at a saving of $2,000 for the county and asked that the commissioners outline what other changes are necessary to the law.

8. Request to put clerical help in the county tax collector's office under a blanket bond. The legislators agreed all clerical help handling money should be bonded and felt it possible to put the tax collector's help under a blanket bond.

9. A request to change the levy date from the third Tuesday in April to the third Tuesday in March. This, however, was met with some opposition from Commissioner J. T. Mason and was tabled without further discussion.

10. Changes in industrial exemptions with a study now being made and the county to make recommendations later.

11. Changes in roads department laws which are obsolete. Recommendations to be made later.

Liquor Law Affected

12. Liquor board law revisions. County Treasurer now takes care of board's books and the commissioners feel the duties could be taken over by the secretary to the board.

13. Western Association of County Commissioners advocates fees for handling license plates at county tax collector's office should be raised. Presently saves Department of Motor Vehicles 39 cents and the county spends $5,000 to collect $3,000.

14. Authorization for county planning and zoning commission to take over service to communities of 10 000 population or less if resolution asking for service comes from community. Legislators agreed this is a good plan.

15. Study of Sanitary Act of 1957 with possible request later from county for amendments of law.

Driver Posts $1,000 Bond In Hit-Run

Stephen L. DuVall Faces Hearing

Stephen Lee DuVall, 21, of 521 Woodside Avenue, yesterday was charged with failing to stop after striking a local woman Thursday evening on Cumberland Street, and was released on $1,000 bond to await a hearing in Trial Magistrate Court.

DuVall was taken before Magistrate Paul W. Barnett yesterday afternoon who set bond at $1,000 for DuVall's appearance in court to face action on the motor vehicle charge.

Magistrate Barnett ordered DuVall committed to the County Jail in default of bond, but authorities released the young man later after bond was posted with Magistrate Russell Nierman at Flintstone.

DuVall was charged yesterday with failing to stop after striking Miss Marguerite Fahey, 56, of 447 Cumberland Street. Miss Fahey was seriously hurt in the hit-and-run accident and is reported "improving" at Sacred Heart Hospital.

Police arrested DuVall Saturday and said he admitted striking Miss Fahey and leaving the scene of the accident.

Attorney Harold E. Naughton represents DuVall and has requested a hearing at a later date.

State's Attorney James S. Getty said yesterday the charge, upon conviction, carries a penalty of imprisonment from 30 days to a year, a fine from $50 to $1,000, or both.

B&O Asked To Repair Crossings

Knox, Valley Street Hazards Are Cited

Mayor J. Edwin Keech yesterday asked the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to inspect all of its grade crossings here so necessary repairs may be scheduled.

In a letter to R. J. Cannon, Cumberland division superintendent, Mayor Keech said it has been called to his attention that many of the B & O crossings are in very bad state of repair.

He said the Knox and Valley Street crossings are particularly bad and that a serious accident may result if they are not repaired immediately.

If an automobile happens to be on the crossing at the time the gates are to be closed, he said, the operator must increase his speed and if he should happen to hit one of the holes, it is possible the vehicle might go out of control.

Mayor Keech said he would be grateful if the railroad checks with the Police Department prior to the closing of any crossing.

The B & O recently repaired the Frederick and Bedford Street crossings.

Earlier this fall, the B & O asked permission to close down the Baltimore Street crossing for two weeks to install new tracks and crossing.

The request was turned down by Police Commissioner Philmore Fleming, who said the free flow of traffic is essential to the well being of the city.

Meyersdale Native Dies In Plane Crash

A former area resident died Sunday in the flaming wreckage of a two-engine plane that crashed in the backyard of a home in Parma, a suburb of Cleveland.

Killed was Clay J. Donges, 42-year-old native of Meyersdale and president of the Donges Aircraft Service at South Euclid, Ohio.

Ohio authorities said the plane was being piloted by John J. Duffy Jr., 35, who also perished in the crash. Duffy was president of an advertising agency which purchased the aircraft about two weeks ago.

Donges, a veteran of more than 10,000 hours of flying, reportedly was helping Duffy familiarize himself with the five-passenger Beechcraft that went into a dive over the residential area about seven miles east of Cleveland, where the plane had taken off.

An investigation into the cause of the crash has been ordered by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Blazing gasoline sprayed two houses, two cars parked in a driveway and a garage, causing damage that was estimated at $10,000.

A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clay Donges, the victim of the crash graduated from Meyersdale High School and Ashland (Ohio) College. Donges was a pilot during World War II and his interest in planes and flying resulted in his founding his flying service.

His company provided flying instruction and chartering service also, friends of the family report.

Survivors include his widow, the former Miss Mildred Pfeiffer of Meyersdale; two young children; a brother, George Donges, a member of the faculty of Ashland College, and two sisters.

Deductible Plan Is Announced By Blue Cross

Would Mean Lower Rate For Members

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Maryland Blue Cross Plan Monday announced $50 deductible insurance coverage for subscribers wishing to pay part of their hospital expenses in exchange for a lower policy rate.

The alternate to standard full-coverage protection provides that a subscriber admitted to a member hospital would pay a deductible of up to $25 for a one-day stay or up to $50 for two days or more.

The maximum deductible chargeable to any individual or family sudscriber to Blue Cross insurance would be $50 for any 12-month period.

The deductible policy, which does not extend to Blue Shield coverage for physicians' services, had been recommended by groups reviewing new rate increases approved for the plan this year.

The new program was one solution officials proposed as a means of curbing alleged over-use of hospital facilities for short visits.

The announcement noted that with the exception of the deductible feature, benefits offered under the insurance program would be identical with the standard Blue Cross coverage.

The rates for the new plan average 15 per cent less than standard coverage, ranging from $3.30 to $7.50 monthly depending on the type of membership. This is 50 cents to $1.50 less than comparable coverage under the standard policy.

Notices of the plan were sent to all groups carrying standard coverage, and non-group subscribers will receive the announcement with their next regular billing.
